Men and Scorpions.
If Dictators Quarrel.
Two Interesting Strikes.
Will Government Finance Strikers?

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

YOU HAVE HEARD about the venomous "black widow" spider and the poisonous scorpion, the latter three times as big as the spider, that had started on a death duel for several days in a garage at Long Beach, Cal.? Crowds came to watch.

An agent of the A. S. P. C. A. also came and saw the spider wrapping the scorpion in spider web, each trying to sting and kill the other. Stopping "cruelty to animals" is the agent's business, so, with one heavy foot, he killed the spider and scorpion. The crowd went away disappointed. It had made bets.

HAD THE little fighters known about that A. S. P. C. A., they might have kept the peace. Will there develop, some day, on this earth a society for the prevention of cruelty to nations, organized for the prevention of war?

If big Russia and small Japan, comparable to the scorpion and the spider and exported to start a war soon, knew that some S. P. C. A. or society for the prevention of war would come and squash them, would they keep peace, or MUST human beings fight?

You have heard of that ferocious Turkish murderer, about to be executed, after a trial lasting three years? After he was jailed, for killing nearly a dozen men, he killed three fellow prisoners, because he did not like them. Man still ranks with savage beasts.

NOT LONG AGO, Mussolini and Hitler met, with all signs of amity eternal, at Venice. Hands were clasped, vows of friendship and co-operation exchanged. Mussolini was to visit Hitler at his country estate as soon as possible and the world said: "How lovely to see a dictator brethren dwelling together in amity."

And now the Mussolini visit to Hitler is postponed indefinitely. Mussolini did not like the Dollfuss assassination, and seems to hold Hitler's Nazi friends responsible.

ONE DANGER FOR nations ruled by dictators or kings resides in the fact that if they meet and quarrel, their nations may meet on the battlefields later.

There was danger of war when Henry the Eighth and Francis the First met on the field of the cloth of gold, and Henry heard of Francis' indiscreet, joking question: "Quand donc, ce gros homme accouchera-t-il?" ("When will that fat man come to childbed?")

EUROPE DISCUSSES the expulsion of Mrs. Sinclair Lewis from Germany, as a forerunner of rigid press control. All copies of the London Times, in Germany, were recently seized and it is expected that foreign correspondents will be asked to leave if they write anything displeasing to Hitler. Engines would not last long without a safety valve, and liberty does not last long without free expression of opinion.

A brilliant Irishman, Richard Brinsley Sheridan, put it dramatically, 124 years ago: "Give them a corrupt house of lords, give them a venal house of commons, give them a tyrannical prince, give them a truckling court, and let me have but an unfettered press, I will defy them to encroach a hair's breadth upon the liberties of England."

MODERN DICTATORS need to encroach several hairs' breadth on established liberties and all agree with Napoleon, who said his power would last but a few weeks if he permitted freedom of the press.

One great German, Goethe, thought Germany made a poor use of free press. "What have the Germans gained by their boasted freedom of the press, except the liberty of abusing each other, as they like?"

And Heine, greatest Jewish poet outside of the Old Testament, and a German, defined free thought as "the free expression of contempt for the thought of others."

TWO INTERESTING strikes: Workers on onion farms at McGuffey, O., were dissatisfied with wages alleged to be eight to twelve cents an hour. If you have weeded onions (this writer has done it), you know that eight cents an hour would be too little. The work done on hands and knees is hard on the back.

The strikers, accused of bombing the residence of the Mayor of McGuffey, now find citizens turned against them, their

GARLAND KEEPS BONSALL OUT

Mayor McNair's appointment of Ward C. Bonsall as City Solicitor was blocked in Council today by the lone vote of President Robert Garland.

Garland, of five councilmen present, opposed confirmation. The other four voted to approve the Mayor's appointment. Five votes were needed.

Garland explained:

"I think it should be held over until more members are here. Certain questions should be asked of the new City Solicitor on how the department will be run."

These questions, councilmen have said, would disclose whether the Solicitor would be independent of the Mayor in interpreting the law and whether he would name Theodore L. Moritz, the Mayor's secretary, to the post of utility expert.

Council confirmed the recess appointment of John D. Kearney as police magistrate. They referred to a committee the appointment of Harmar D. Denny, Jr., former safety director, as head of the Traction Conference Board to succeed C. A. Finley.

Motor Officer Hurt Avoiding Collision

Motorcycle Patrolman Walter Neubauer, 36, of 1305 North Murtland avenue, proved a new kind of a good Samaritan today.

To avoid striking an automobile in Bigelow boulevard at Thirty-first street, and causing possible injury to the occupants, he swerved his machine, overbalanced and tumbled headlong to the boulevard, his fellow officers reported. He was taken to Mercy Hospital.

Police Insist Barry Shooting Accident

The homicide squad's investigation into the fatal shooting of former Police Inspector John W. Barry on August 15 will probably be concluded this week, according to Lieut. Franklin T. McQuaide. He said his third report on the case, agreeing with the previous two, which termed the shooting accidental, will be presented to the Coroner's office Wednesday or Thursday.

PARTY CHIEF BALKS AT STEEDLE

Coleman Repudiates Doctor Convicted Of Vote Theft

By MARK SHIELDS

Republican County Chairman William H. Coleman today repudiated the candidacy of Dr. Joseph O. Steedle, veteran member of the Legislature from the Twelfth district, for re-election.

In a sharp statement commenting on Steedle's refusal to withdraw from the ticket after his conviction in Federal Court on a charge of vote conspiracy growing out of the 1932 election, Coleman said:

"As Republican county chairman I cannot in good conscience ask the public to give him support."

Steedle, apprised of Coleman's statement, declared he would not quit. He said:

"My position is the same that it always has been. I will not withdraw and my name will be on the ballot in November."

PARLEY HELD

Today's unprecedented action by Coleman followed a conference between the chairman and Steedle last Thursday, at which the legislator was urged to withdraw. At that time Coleman said he disapproved Steedle's stubbornness, but would not advocate cutting of the ticket and would support all Republican nominees.

The statement aroused a storm of disapproving comment, much of it from active members of the Republican party, and Coleman was advised by some of his closest friends to issue a repudiation of Steedle. On the other hand, Steedle has powerful friends, especially in that wing of the regular organization headed by Senator James J. Coyne.

Today's action by Coleman probably means a break between the county chairman and the Senator, who has held that if there is a special session of the Legislature Steedle should attend, as well as continue as a candidate.

HURT BY CRITICISM

Coleman, it is known, felt keenly the adverse comments on his statement of last week, and today intimated he did not care to accept responsibility for any action which would even remotely connect him with some of the tricky

Machado's Haven 'Veritable Fortress'

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Gerardo Machado, former President of Cuba, is living in a "veritable fortress" in Santo Domingo, H. Murray Jacoby, former special envoy of the United States, said today.

He returned from Port-au-Prince, where he attended the inauguration of President Rafael Trujillo y Molina, whom he referred to as "the Mussolini of the Caribbean."

Forced Down, Lost Mail Flier Reports

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Aug. 27.—(AP.)—A telegram was received at the TWA, Inc., airport here today from Pilot Earl W. Fleet, of Kansas City, saying he had safely landed his plane Sunday at La Chapelle, N. M.

Fleet's telegram gave no further information regarding his enforced landing.

Bank Aide Drowns In Spill

Death reached out and claimed a Pittsburgh bank officer who was an expert swimmer, but passed by his banker "buddy" who could not swim, when their canoe overturned in Long Lake near Huntsville, Ont.

The dead man is Norman E. McClelland, 42, of 601 Clyde street, assistant cashier of the First National Bank at Pittsburgh.

The tragic story of his drowning, which occurred Saturday, was told today in an Associated Press dispatch and in telephone messages to bank officials.

Mr. McClelland

McClelland and W. J. F. Egli, 44, of 325 Jefferson drive, Mt. Lebanon, payroll teller at the First National, were heavily clothed in hunting garb when their canoe toppled over, the reports stated.

An excellent swimmer, McClelland struck out for shore. He was within a few yards of shore when he shouted:

"I'm gone."

He sank in eight feet of water. Egli, unable to swim a stroke, clung onto the upturned canoe for three hours before he was rescued by Capt. J. Emery, an aviator stationed at Lieblost, who circled the scene in an airplane.

When rescued, Egli was almost exhausted.

McClelland's body was recovered later. His death was attributed to heart failure. A World War veteran, he served in Company A, 331st Battalion, Tank Corps, in France.

He leaves his wife, Hester, who was accompanying the body home today; his mother, Mrs. Harris I. McClelland; two sisters, Mrs. Ernest Ainsworth, Pittsburgh, and Mrs. Martha McDonald, Glendale, Cal., and a brother, Samuel G. McClelland, of this city.

2 PUT IN VAULT IN BANK HOLDUP

THREE SPRINGS, Pa., Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Two poorly dressed men, one wearing shaded glasses, shut the cashier and teller of the First National Bank in a vault today, stuffed between $2,000 and $3,500 into an oilcloth bag and sped away into the mountains in a small blue car.

L. Allen Cutshall, 73, the cashier, and Charles E. Rotz, 40, the teller, said the robbers took all the money on hand, except for some small change.

Cutshall and Rotz said they were in the vault about 10 minutes before they were released by Fred Shaffer, a customer, who stopped in the bank just after the robbers scrambled out of the door.

Sunday Throng Sets New Record for Fair

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—A new paid attendance record was established Sunday at the World's Fair, 209,756 persons having passed through the gates at midnight last night.

The previous high of 181,356 was established July 4.

CITIES FACE BURDEN OF RELIEF

U. S. and State Would Shift 25 Million to Municipalities

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Cities and counties in Pennsylvania may be called upon to put up Pennsylvania's share of direct relief costs pending action in the regular session of the Legislature.

Aubrey Williams, deputy federal relief administrator, said today:

"If it comes to a showdown, I think the money will have to come from the cities. They have the borrowing power."

Eric Biddle, Pennsylvania state relief administrator, submitted to Williams a plan under which Pennsylvania would get a federal relief grant in September. Biddle was to see Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins later and Gov. Pinchot is to confer with Hopkins tomorrow.

With relief costs in Pennsylvania running $11,000,000 a month it is estimated that cities would have to raise $25,000,000 to match federal funds until the Legislature can act.

In the event a plan is adopted under which cities would pay a part of the relief costs, it is possible that county governments also would be required to provide funds.

Biddle said the state could not borrow money until 1938 because of the constitutional debt limitation. No part of profits from state liquor stores, allocated to relief purposes, has become available because the profits were used for capital.

In this situation, Pennsylvania officials said, a special session of the Legislature could not meet the problem. A new tax levy of any kind, officials say, could not

ALUMINUM MEN OPEN PARLEY

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Representatives of the Aluminum Company of America and their striking employes met today with Lloyd Garrison, chairman of the Labor Relations Board, to talk over a settlement of the walkout.

This conference, the first between the company and the strikers since the union employes walked out several weeks ago, was called by Garrison after attempts of Fred Keightly, a Labor Department conciliator, failed to arrange a settlement.

Keightly was at today's conference, as were other members of the labor board.

The company was represented by I. W. Wilson, vice president in charge of operations; R. E. Parks, his assistant, and M. M. Anderson, director of personnel.

Boris Shishkin, American Federation of Labor executive; A. R. Buller, president of the Aluminum Workers' Council, and Fred A. Wettmore, union secretary, spoke for the strikers.

The union struck for the "check-off" of union dues, a written contract, and a universal wage scale. The company contends the union demands would mean a closed shop, which the company is unwilling to grant.

Wreckers Peril Famous Mosque

ISTANBUL, Turkey, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—The world-famed mosque of Saint Sophia was badly shaken and nearly collapsed yesterday as a result of wrecking operations at the adjoining law courts, where a disastrous fire occurred earlier this year.

The supporting columns of two high walls which workmen were tearing down suddenly gave way and a great mass of stone toppled toward the mosque.

Roosevelt Bars Johnson Resignation in Hot Duel With Latin Proverbs

GEN. HUGH JOHNSON . . . . HE WOULDN'T BE PUSHED OUT!

PROBE SKIPS CHARGES BY AGED

Welfare Head Urges Improvements at Butler Farm

BUTLER, Pa., Aug. 27.—Charges of mistreatment of inmates of the Butler County Home against Fred C. Herold, former superintendent who resigned last week, were ignored today in an investigator's report to Mrs. Alice F. Liveright, State Secretary of Welfare.

The only reference made to the former superintendent in the report made by Miss Isabel F. Polley, field agent of the Welfare Department, was the following brief comment:

"In view of the recently announced resignation of your steward, we urge a careful selection in filling this vacancy."

REJECTS NEW POST

Herold, following his resignation as head of the Butler Home, was offered a new position by the county commissioners as supervisor of bridges and a special job of highway construction, at $130 a month, but it was learned today he had refused to accept the new post.

In discussing the report, Mrs. Liveright said the investigation of the county home did not consider the charges of maltreatment against Herold because the former superintendent is facing criminal charges, which were beyond the jurisdiction of the welfare department.

URGES IMPROVEMENTS

Mrs. Liveright revealed the report in a letter to the Butler County commissioners, making recommendations for improvement of conditions at the home.

One of recommendations most emphasized by the report concerned the question of adequate nursing care for the inmates. The report said:

"We understand you have no trained nurse or even practical nurses on your staff. May we suggest that a trained nurse would be of great assistance in caring for those aged and sick inmates. It is most essential that some trained service be secured for this purpose."

Reading further, the report said:

"In addition, the number of staff members is too small in comparison to the number of inmates of the home. We understand that beside the steward and matron, there are only two employes, one for cooking for the institution and the other cooking for the steward's family."

The report set up a list of requirements which should be met by the new superintendent, such as:

At least a high school education, five years business experience, knowledge of book-keeping and store-keeping methods; ability to lay out work for others; ability to meet and deal with people; integrity and good judgment.

NRA General Tried to Make Orphan of Blue Eagle

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—The deep-seated character of NRA's latest troubles became apparent today when it was learned that Gen. Hugh S. Johnson angrily walked out on last Monday's White House conference, resigned in writing and reconsidered only on the firm insistence of President Roosevelt.

The dispute arose over an NRA reorganization plan submitted to the President by Donald Richberg, the NRA counsel, and Frances Perkins, the Secretary of Labor. Among other things, the plan was interpreted by Johnson as contemplating his own retirement to private life.

The general walked out when Mr. Roosevelt, seeking to smooth the ruffled spirits of his conferees, suggested that a decision be postponed while Johnson took a rest and a trip to Europe.

JOHNSON STILL BOSS

The reconciliation, so far as Johnson is concerned, was consummated just before Mr. Roosevelt's departure Saturday for Hyde Park. Under its terms Johnson stays on as administrator and probably will become

Dancer Quits King Seeking Royal Wife

VIENNA, Aug. 27.—(INS.)—Francisca Janku, beautiful dancer known as the "Albanian Lupescu," surprised her friends by reappearing in Vienna today, having returned from Tirana, capital of Albania, where she had been living in a luxurious villa in the diplomatic section which King Zogu had presented her with at the reported cost of $130,000.

It was learned that Mlle. Janku had separated from Zogu because he is about to marry in order to have a son and heir. It is reported that Zogu has an Egyptian princess in mind.

RAILROADS SEEK RATE BOOST

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—The nation's railroads, confronted with mounting operating costs, due to wage increases and increasing costs of materials and supplies, today petitioned the Interstate Commerce Commission for a "moderate" increase in freight rates.

The petition said operating expenses will be increased by $293,050,000 annually, of which $156,000,000 will be to labor costs and $137,000,000 to the costs of materials and supplies.

A statement issued by the American Railway Association in connection with the petition, said that in 1933 railroad operating expenses were only one-half of what they were in 1929, "and yet the railroads, as a whole, failed to take in enough money to cover their operating expenses, taxes and interest charges without any allowance for dividends to their stockholders."

200 Sunday Dancers Flee As Police Raid Hall

There were 200 lads and lassies out there on the floor illustrating the latest variations of the rhumba or something.

Suddenly everybody dived for the windows.

Six constables and two state policemen were the reason.

They strode into the Glen Willard dance hall on the Glen Willard beach and all at once the musicians stopped making music and said "pshaw."

And the pretty lassies, who a minute before had been telling their boy-friends what wonderful dancers they were, began to scream and weep and wonder what they could tell their mammas if their names were in the papers.

Constable Howard C. Doughty, of Crescent Township, who led the raid, estimated that 100 or more of the boys and girls escaped indecorously through the windows.

But 26 of the men, including the proprietor and seven musicians, were arrested, charged with violating the blue laws—dancing on the Sabbath. Doughty said he had warned the proprietor a week ago.

Constable Doughty proved that he was a gallant and understanding gentleman by telling all the scared little girls to go home to mamma and don't do it again!

The 26 males posted forfeits for hearing tonight before Squire Lawrence Gibbs, of Sewickley.

Now who said it's the woman who pays?

ICKES, OIL INSTITUTE CHIEF CLASH AT DRAKE DEDICATION

BRITON, TEAGLE, PINCHOT ALSO SPEAK

U. S. Not to Give Up Industry's Control, Secretary Says

TITUSVILLE, Pa., Aug. 27.—(AP.)—The old order of "rugged individualism" clashed in a flow of eloquence today with the government's "New Deal" on the open air platform before more than 50,000 persons gathered to commemorate drilling of the first oil well 75 years ago. Harold L. Ickes, secretary of the Interior and administrator of the petroleum industry, said:

"The nation as the representative and protector of all the people and the defender of their rights and liberties, has a paramount interest in oil, which, if it is not to be derelict in its duty, must be maintained.

"Happily, if it may be, in cooperation with those engaged in the oil industry—but nevertheless maintained."

ASKS FREEDOM

Suggesting the "hand of the government" be lifted from the industry, Axtell J. Byles, president of the American Petroleum Institute which promoted a memorial park dedicated today to Col. Edwin L. Drake, driller of the first well, said:

"Judgments differ as to the policy which should be adopted by and for the petroleum industry upon the expiration of the National Industrial Recovery Act next year.

"Some of us do not believe in fairies or panaceas or economic magic, or in guaranteed profits or price-fixing, or think that a series of rules will prove any more successful when applied to an industry such as ours than they did when applied to the liquor traffic."

BRITON ON PLATFORM

The program also brought to the speakers' platform the leaders of two great oil firms in two countries—Sir Henri Deterding, director of the Royal Dutch Shell group of British-controlled oil enterprises, and Walter C. Teagle, president of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey.

Joining with the others in tributes to the man who defied public ridicule to launch one of the nation's present greatest industries was Gov. Gifford Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, and Gov. George White, of Ohio, himself a Titusville native.

Speakers painted golwing pictures of the first oil well, which was brought in on August 27, 1849, a discovery which Ickes said is "doubtful whether any other single one since the beginning of time has had such a profound and revolutionary effect upon human life upon this planet."

ATTACKS GREEDY

Drake got 20 barrels a day from his 69½-foot well and was paid $20 a barrel for the product. Today there are more than 330,000 producing wells in 19 states, representing an investment Ickes estimated at more than $12,000,000,000.

Swinging vigorously into the present problems of the industry, Ickes continued:

"The greed of men for quick profits, without a thought for the welfare of the country or any concern for the future, even their own, has been defended not only by selfish exploiters of this valuable natural resource but by a school of political thought which has euphemistically applied the term 'rugged individualism' to unpatriotic greed, ruthless waste and unparalleled selfishness."

NEW WELL 'SHOT'

The Oil Administrator said he believed "we are at the dawn" of a better day with respect to the industry and said even "most of those" who "apprehensively consented" to adjust themselves to the requirements of the petroleum code have come to regard the Federal Oil Administration as a "friendly and disinterested governmental agency intent upon helping" the industry to help itself.

As a dramatic prelude to today's program, a new oil well will be "shot" near the city, from a depth of 800 feet—11 times deeper into the earth than Col. Drake went for his first rivulet of "black gold."

Fireworks and a mardi gras are scheduled for tonight, officially climaxing the four-day schedule.

9 Pickpockets Jailed At Oil Celebration

TITUSVILLE, Pa., Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Drawn to this city, police said, by the thousands attending the diamond jubilee of oil, nine alleged pickpockets are under arrest. They were recognized and pointed out for arrest by a Pittsburgh detective. Six were said to be from Pittsburgh and three from Cleveland.

Woman Expert Sees Travel in 'Auto-Plane'

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—John Citizen may be traveling around not so many years hence in a combination airplane and automobile—so says Mrs. Phoebe Omlie.

MRS. PHOEBE OMLIE

Though small, Mrs. Omlie carries one of the longest New Deal titles—"special assistant for air intelligence of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics." As such, she has just completed a 10,000-mile whirl to catch the new ideas in the air. She said:

"I found a great deal of interest being taken in a combination auto and airplane, and a great deal of work being done toward that end. Our great hope is to have such a convenience, reasonably enough priced to come into widespread use, within the next few years."

She was busy, too, on her work as research aid to Air Commerce Director Eugene Vidal in his campaign for a light plane, at low cost, which will bring back into aviation some of the 2,500 licensees who dropped out in the last fiscal year. She said:

"One of the outstanding things I learned was that people are beginning to realize it is important to bring the cost of airplanes down, and are studying that angle."

leader kidnaped and badly beaten.

MEXICO PRESENTS the other unusual strike, that of sixty-two radio operators, broadcasters and others. For one hundred hours they held possession of the station, broadcasting continuously, telling their story, asking for public sympathy. That is new. One Mexican broadcaster, Ramon Perez, "as thin as Mahatma Gandhi," went 104 hours without food, did not sleep and continued broadcasting during the entire time. Such energy deserves success, and got it.

THE PAN-AMERICAN Radio Company paid the strikers' claims in full, including back pay, and asks permission to go into liquidation, and quit business. If it does that, under Mexican law, receivers, already appointed, may turn the whole plant over to the workers. "Other countries, other manners."

WE MAY COME to that here, or something like it. Leaders of an important textile strike, to be called next week, announce in Atlanta that they expect the federal government to see them through the strike and finance them.

The leaders say the government has pledged itself "to let no one go hungry," so this is a good time for strikes. Hitherto strikes have been lost because union funds could no longer take care of strikers and their families.

With government funds to call on, strikes might last indefinitely. If strikers should, on the Mexican plan, be allowed to take over any plant ceasing to operate, that would end the "lockout." It would test also the contention of some managers of industries that the workers would not be able to manage the industry profitably. Even were it turned over to them.

PRINCESS MARINA

engaged to marry Princess Marina of Greece.

The prince, attending a music festival at Salzburg, accompanied by Prince Paul and Princess Olga of Jugo-Slavia, and by Princess Marina, was asked by the Mail's correspondent for information about the story. The prince was quoted as saying:

"There is no truth at all in these rumors."

He added that he would be very glad if the inquirer would make the denial known.

M'NAIR RETURNS WITH A ROSE AND PEEVE

Bemoans Lack of Funds For Entertainment Purposes

Mayor McNair was back from St. Louis today with a rose in his lapel and a peeve.

His Honor, who no doubt floored 'em in St. Louis with his single-tax speech, complained that in St. Louis, Mayor Dickmann had a $15,000 contingent fund with which to entertain guests.

"And maybe he didn't entertain me! . . . Why shouldn't I have something like that. I can't even give away a key to the city."

His Honor said that Dickmann had advised him to hold up payrolls if he can't get what he wants from Council. And the Mayor indicated he'll do just that if he doesn't get action from Council before he and Mrs. McNair leave for Europe Friday.

Council's scheduled meeting for today probably won't materialize. Councilmen Thomas Gallagher and John M. Huston radioed today that their ship, delayed by fog, would not reach Montreal before Tuesday.

SOCIAL JUSTICE MEET SPOILED

A meeting in Frick Park of the Pittsburgh League for Social Justice, attended by Councilman Walter R. Demmler, with speakers sponsored by George E. Evans, superintendent of building inspection, was interrupted yesterday by police, who insisted there was to be no meeting in the park.

Circumventing the order, the group declared the gathering to be a picnic, and sitting in a circle, presented questions to the speaker of the day, Benjamin C. Marsh, secretary of the People's Lobby. Marsh answered at length, occasionally reading from a typewritten page.

Police made the last gesture, however, in breaking up a Social Leaguers' ball game, begun after the "picnic."

GIVES UP PROBE OF GIRL'S DEATH

GREENSBURG, Pa., Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Coroner H. A. McMurray, discussing the Viola Dennis case, said any further action must come from the District Attorney or the state police.

The girl, a pretty 23-year-old school teacher, died in a Charleroi hospital early Saturday, August 25, from a broken neck, a fractured skull and other injuries.

State police said she was returning home with her fiance, William Leatherman, 24, former Charleroi High School football star. They quoted the youth as saying that Miss Dennis got out of the car near a refreshment stand, stumbled and fell down a six-foot embankment.

The officers said they were satisfied with the youth's story, but continued their investigation, awaiting the return of the girl's father, a Donora councilman and steel company official. He arrived home yesterday and stated that he was satisfied with the explanation.

Two Scottsboro Boys Denied Special Trial

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Aug. 27.—(AP.)—The Alabama Supreme Court announced today it would not call a special session of the court to act on the application for a rehearing of its decision confirming the death sentences of Clarence Norris and Haywood Patterson, Negro defendants in the Scottsboro ca .

Patterson and Norris were sentenced to death following their conviction in Morgan Circuit Court of attacking Mrs. Victoria Price aboard a freight train near Paint Rock, Ala., in 1931.

COURT BACKS STATE DRIVE ON CLUBS

Judge Cites Rum Law Evasion Charges in Refusing Charter

Upholding the state's drive against "one-man" chartered clubs, Judge James H. Gray today denied the application of the Tolo Social Club for a charter to establish a club at 4927 Center avenue.

Last May the court denied the same club a petition for a charter at 368 South Atlantic avenue.

In denying the charter, Judge Gray said:

"We feel that we should take notice of the recent public complaint of the authorities of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania that club charters are being used to evade the liquor laws.

"We are being petitioned to revoke charters on this account.

"The conditions lead us to believe we should be conservative about granting charters for clubs for which liquor licenses can be obtained and that such charters should not be granted in residential districts against the will of the majority."

Nick de Basio, of 160 Luna street, sought the charter as president of the club. He listed five incorporators.

CLUB RAIDED, SIX FINED

It appears that the male associate members of the Variety Bowling Club, second floor of 1414 Fifth avenue, a women's club, chartered for the ostensible purpose of "social, recreational and literary advancement," have a higher appreciation of its advantages than the women.

Police testified in Center Avenue Police Court today that when they raided the club late yesterday, after receiving many complaints, they found not one woman but six men seated at tables, with empty beer glasses all around.

Books and minutes confiscated revealed 25 women charter members and 532 associate members, men and women, police testified.

Inspector John Vincent testified 11 cases and a half barrel of beer were seized, also a partly filled bottle of moonshine, found behind the bar.

Vince Walsh, reputed proprietor, was fined $50 or 30 days in jail, on a charge of keeping a disorderly house, by Magistrate John B. Kearney. Five other men, one a Negro, were fined $10 each as visitors.

CAROL SO BUSY MAGDA LEAVES

International News Service.

VIENNA, Aug. 27.—Mme. Magda Lupescu, auburn-haired favorite of King Carol of Rumania, arrived here today for a visit of several days before proceeding to Paris.

Accompanied by several members of the Rumanian secret service, Mme. Lupescu spent the morning shopping and the afternoon touring the countryside by automobile.

It was learned King Carol told the secret service men they would be personally responsible for her safety.

A prominent Rumanian diplomat denied there was anything permanent about the separation, explaining King Carol is deeply immersed in affairs of state, preparing for the forthcoming visit of former King Alfonso to Bucharest and his own trip in the near future to Sofia to meet with King Boris of Bulgaria and King Alexander of Jugo-Slavia.

King Carol plans to join Mme. Lupescu in Paris toward the end of September. She plans to stay in the French capital with her sister, who recently married Prof. Serge Voronoff, the noted rejuvenation expert.

Broker Denies Abandoning Daughter

MRS. COBINA WRIGHT

Ex-Wife's Charges Mistake, Says Newlywed.

International News Service.

TAOS, N. M., Aug. 27.—A misunderstanding between William May Wright, New York broker, and his former wife, Mrs. Cobina Wright, society leader and talented singer, led to the filing of criminal charge of child abandonment against him, Wright explained here today.

Wright, who returned last week to Taos, where he now lives, with a New Mexico divorce, a Maine marriage license and a new wife, declared that he regretted exceedingly the unpleasant development. He said that his former wife refused to let him see their daughter and that, despite the fact that he had sent money for the child's support each month, had sworn out a warrant against him. He said:

"We agreed last January to get a divorce. There was no secret about it."

Other than that she was not an artist's model, Wright did not disclose the identity of his new wife.

LOUISE GIVES UP FAKE COUNT

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Blue-eyed, romantic-minded Louise Krist, whom Magistrate Jonah J. Goldstein found guilty of being a wayward minor 10 days ago, today received a suspended sentence with several conditions attached.

The 18-year-old's waywardness consisted principally in falling in love with the self-styled Prince Childe de Rohan last June in a Greenwich Village poetry salon and disappearing with him for two weeks.

But the prince's title turned out to be as faulty as his verses. When police apprehended the two in response to an appeal from the girl's parents it turned out that De Rohan was an ex-convict named D'Harcourt who was born in Oklahoma.

Today the young woman's ardor seemed definitely cooled. She agreed smilingly and readily to all the magistrate's conditions for suspension of the sentence.

Japs Vote Millions For War Equipment

TOKIO, Aug. 27.—(INS.)—The new Japanese budget contains an appropriation of 80,000,000 yen (approximately $40,000,000) for aviation and 55,000,000 yen for modernization of war equipment, it was learned today.

There will also be an appropriation of 120,000,000 yen for Manchurian expenses, and 16,000,000 yen for the development of new military schemes.

TOKIO CHARGES PLOTS TO SOVIETS

30 Russians Face Trial In Train Wrecks; Threats Hurled

TOKIO, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—The Japanese government charged today that the Third Internationale is responsible for fomenting from Moscow intrigues against Japan involving train wrecks in Manchukuo on the Chinese Eastern Railway.

This was the latest blast in the conflict of propaganda Japan and Manchukuo are waging with the Soviet, while each party awaits signs of the other's weakening in deadlocked negotiations for Japan's purchase of the railroad from Russia.

30 FACE TRIAL

A foreign office spokesman said 30 Soviet employes of the railroad arrested in Manchukuo "will be tried in two sets on charges of train wreckings and intrigues against Manchukuo and Japan, at the behest of the Third Internationale. He said:

"Some of their confessions showed involvement of the Third Internationale according to official information reaching Tokio."

A spokesman indicated the arrests—which totaled 72 according to latest newspaper dispatches—might continue, depending upon whether alleged confessions of those now held involved others.

THREATS HURLED

Meanwhile, the Tokio foreign office learned that some high Soviet officials of the railroad are "packing their bags." It was not known whether this was due to fears of drastic action by Japan and Manchukuo, or if Moscow intends to change its representatives in the hope of bettering the situation.

Exchanges, protests and threats between Tokio and Moscow apparently has reached the stage where each is merely pigeonholing the other's protests and shooting back some form of counter-blast without the usual diplomatic niceties of formal acknowledgements and replies.

FARM PARADE PROTESTS JAPS

International News Service.

PHOENIX, Ariz., Aug. 27.—To demonstarte against what they believe to be an "invasion" of the rich Salt River Valley by Japanese colonists from the Imperial Valley of Southern California, 3,900 American farmers today were scheduled to parade.

The American farmers had protested that certain leased lands had been subleased to the Japanese in violation to the Arizona anti-alien land laws. Threats of forcible eviction were withheld.

The American farmers had scheduled Saturday night as the "deadline" when Japanese should leave the valley, but the "deadline" was extended indefinitely and the farmers agreed that the Arizona laws should take their course.

Resolutions that were addressed to the Japanese Consul in Los Angeles declared it "only fair" if Americans on Japanese soil violated Japanese laws, they should be prosecuted in the courts as Japanese would be on American soil.

Weather Conditions

Pressure is high over the Atlantic Coast states, the center, 30.24 inches being located at Elkins, W. Va. Another high appears in the Northwest, Prince Albert, 30.40 inches. These two highs cover most of the country, resulting in mostly fair weather. Rainfall for the last 24 hours was limited to the South Atlantic and the Gulf states, and to a little in the region of the Upper Lakes. Temperature changes were towards cooler over the Atlantic Coast and towards warmer over the interior of the country. There were no high maximum temperatures yesterday and the temperatures this morning are somewhat below the seasonal normal.

Enemy 'Attacks' Jersey, Atlantic City in 'Ruins'

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 27.—(AP.)—"Enemy" troops of the formidable "black" entente landed at three South Jersey points early today under the protecting fire of mythical warship convoys, bringing sudden "war" to the northeast coast of the nation.

(The Army general staff flashed the reports of the enemy landing—the first act in the Army war game maneuvers, which will be climaxed next week by hypothetically sanguinary battles as imaginary American troops fight to defend—on paper—the state from an equally imaginary invader.)

Atlantic City, most of its famous hotels in "ruins" after a theoretical bombardment by the heavy guns of the black fleet, was in the hands of the enemy, who were reported virtually in control of the southern part of New Jersey.

The lightning rapidity with which the black forces struck at strategic New Jersey and the metropolitan seacoast followed by a few days the unexpected declaration of war on the United States by the Black Alliance which seeks to capitalize on the fact that the American fleet and half of its military forces and aircraft are already battling a blue invader on the Pacific Coast.

Besides Atlantic City the blacks landed forces at Cape May and Port Norris in this state.

Panic theoretically gripped the central section of the state with many families preparing to evacuate their homes before the menace of advancing black troops.

Two Texas Girl Pilots Saved From Disaster In Endurance Flight Mishap Over Chicago

Oil Cast Overboard In Error

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—(AP)—Despite a near disaster which threatened to end their flight, two Texas girls passed the one-third mark early today in their attempt for a new woman's air endurance record.

The two, Mary Owens and Jean La Rose, accidentally threw overboard their reserve oil supply last night, believing it to be used lubricant. Then they brought their Lone Star low over the ground and gave a distress signal.

A note was hoisted by rope from their plane to the refueling ship, and soon six gallons of oil were lowered in the first refueling contact at dark since the flight started.

The girls took off at 8:13 p. m. Thursday. To pass the record, they must remain aloft until after 7:58 p. m. Sunday, September 2.

SUB TEACHERS

International News Service.

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—Eighteen thousand laughing, shouting school teachers participated in the most joyous payday in all Chicago's history today.

Following brief ceremonies by Mayor Edward J. Kelly, the first of the long overdue checks were handed to Harrison H. Kincaid, chemistry instructor, who had waited in line since 7:30 last night to get his share of the $28,500,000 to be paid out.

A deafening cheer went up as Mayor Kelly entered the City State Bank Building. All along long lines in the streets, the glad word was passed on to the teachers that "things were moving."

'WE WANT PAY!'

Mayor Kelly had been slightly delayed and from many throats came the cry:

"When do we get our checks? We want Kelly! We want Kelly!"

Presently the Mayor appeared smilingly between solid lines of humanity that jammed the broad lobby of the building. This was a sight the teachers had awaited for seven long months.

Fourteen cashiers' windows were manned by many expert tellers, many of whom had worked through the entire night.

STORM BANKS

First to get his checks was Kincaid. His smile broadened to a grin. Kincaid took the batch of 14 checks amounting to $1,600, thanked the Mayor and moved on. Then came Miss Katherine Kitzenberg, an elementary teacher. Soon the floodgates were opened and the army of educators rushed forward in a stirring, excited mass to the cashier's windows.

Earlier in the morning the big RFC check, which furnished cash for the pay checks, was delivered to officials of the Federal Reserve Bank. The Board of Education bond issue covering the amount of the loan was then brought from the First National Bank and the exchange effected.

BANS SURGERY TO SAVE LIFE OF CHILD

Recants After Prayers Held for Victim Of 'Kidnaping'

PORT PAYNE, Ala., Aug. 27.—(AP)—Parents of Wallace Doyle Sharp, 8, today refused to allow a physician to take the child to a hospital at Gadsden, Ala., for an operation on his infected leg after they had been warned that further delay might prove fatal.

More than 100 persons surrounded the Sharp home this morning, praying that a "faith" cure of the affliction which had swollen the boy's leg to twice its normal size.

Deputy Sheriff Rufus Smith and Dr. H. J. Guest, who went to the Sharp home today to take the child to a hospital for an operation on the leg, were informed the boy "will never be taken from this house except by force."

The lad was spirited away Friday by members of the Holiness Church here, to which his parents belong, after county officials were en route to his home to take him to medical aid.

RETURNED TO HOME

He was returned to his home here yesterday from Dutton, 27 miles away in the hills of Jackson County, where he was taken to give the "faith cure" for which members of the church have been constantly praying, Sims to be completed.

Dr. Guest said further delay might prove fatal and that it was possible that the leg would be amputated immediately after the lad is taken to a hospital. He said:

"An immediate operation is necessary if the boy is to have any chance to saving the leg."

The father of the boy earlier had agreed to let a physician treat him.

Sheriff S. W. Pope guaranteed that no charges would be brought against Sharp if he permitted medical care.

The father brought the boy back to Port Payne last night, after Officer Rufus Smith went to the house with Homer Elrod, a member of the Holiness Church, who with the pastor, the Rev. James Miller, had accompanied the father and son to Dutton.

Officer Smith said the father consented to let a Port Payne physician treat the boy here, or to take him to a hospital at Gadsden.

AUNT INTERFERES

A sister of the mother, Miss Rhoda Wilson, set authorities on the trail of the suffering lad when she called in Dr. Guest. She is not a member of the Holiness faith and got tired of seeing Doyle suffer.

Three men, including the Holiness Church pastor, the Rev. James Miller, jailed Saturday, are free on bond, on blanket charges of interfering with officers because they refused to tell Sheriff Pope where he could find the group that abducted the boy.

GIRL AIDS BOLT FROM JAIL

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Eleven prisoners took charge of the Hamilton County Jail today, imprisoned all jailers and trusties, and escaped under a fusillade of shots from officers. Three of the eleven were recaptured.

Lige Cagle, charged with highway robbery, admitted, Chief Deputy Sheriff W. G. Sears said, that he led the break. A girl in Savannah, Ga., Cagle said, sent him $30 worth of hacksaws, with which he and two cellmates severed a lever in a lock box.

The prisoners went first into the jail office and captured Night Jailer Tom Carter and several trusties. Jack Youngblood, who was captured along with Bob Kerr and Cagle, said they raided the kitchen before leaving.

Trying to escape in an automobile he said the girl had sent, Cagle was captured near the jail.

WRECKAGE AT GRATERFORD: INTERIOR OF A CELL BLOCK

COLLEGEVILLE, Pa., Aug. 27.—(AP.)—The 200 rioting convicts who smashed ruthlessly at state property in Saturdays damaging uprising at the Graterford branch of Eastern State Penitentiary learn today what punishment they receive for their three-hour rebellion.

THE PRICE OF RIOTING: A PRISON BUILDING IN FLAMES

With virtual normal calm restored once again to the prison under vigilant State Police and guards, the prison board of trustees meets today to consider the penalty the recalcitrants must pay. At the same time, some 15 of the rioters are to be arraigned in Montgomery County Court on charges of arson and destruction of state property.

Seventy-four of the 200 convicts are no longer at Graterford. Handcuffed in sets of four, and under heavy guard, they were sped last night to the Eastern Penitentiary in Philadelphia.

The transfer was made a few hours after the police and guards quelled a second threatened outbreak.

A far different picture was painted Saturday when the 200 rioters, beginning at the kitchen, went through three cell blocks, the new weaving plant, a garage and a large barn, wrecking everything in sight as they moved along.

MYSTERY MARKS NUDE'S DEATH

International News Service.

REDWOOD CITY, Cal., Aug. 27.—Identity of a beautiful young woman whose nude body was discovered by a hiker in a lonely spot on King's Mountain, remained a mystery today.

Sheriff James J. McGrath and Coroner Kohn Layng believed the woman, between 25 and 30 years of age, was the victim of an illegal operation. She had been dead two months.

Authorities hoped to establish identification through the dental work. One gold tooth and four molars were missing. A plate replaced the missing teeth.

The body was found face down over a tree stump at the foot of a 200-foot embankment. The position of the body convinced deputy sheriffs that it was placed in the lonely region and not thrown from a speeding automobile on the Skyline boulevard which skirts the mountain.

An autopsy failed to determine the cause of death. Dr. Harry Clattenburg reported there was no skull fracture or other broken bones, which would have resulted if the victim had been thrown from a speeding car.

BOY, 19, JAILED IN BRIDE ATTACK

TYLER, Tex., Aug. 27.—(AP.)—A 19-year-old youth, accused of kidnaping a bride and groom and criminally attacking the former, was held in an undisclosed city today following threats of mob violence.

A large crowd gathered at the jail yesterday when the suspect, who gave his name as J. D. Willis, 19, was brought here from Palestine where he had been arrested. He was hurriedly spirited away by sheriff's officers after the victims, Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell Herring, had identified him as the attacker.

Willis was identified by police as an ex-convict from Louisiana.

The Herrings said they were accosted near here Saturday night by a man who forced them at pistol point to drive to a secluded spot.

The attacker fled in his victim's motor car which was recovered at Palestine. Officers said they also found Mrs. Herring's engagement ring and a quantity of money.

The officers, who left Friday on their secret mission, refused to disclose where they had been or what they had discovered.

They denied they had been searching for the body of John Hamilton, another Dillinger gangster who had been reported slain. They also said they had not been looking for George "Baby Face" Nelson, another of the outlaw gang still at large.

ACTRESS TELLS ON MRS. COO

COOPERSTOWN, N. Y., Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Edna Hanover, state's witness, testified today in the murder trial of Eva Coo, that after a state trooper found the body of Harry Wright, Mrs. Coo asked her to "keep still" about a policy she held on Wright's life.

Miss Hanover, former entertainer at Mrs. Coo's roadhouse, said this request was made to her after Trooper W. E. Cadwell came to the roadhouse to report finding Wright's body in a ditch. The state contends it was thrown there the night of June 14 after Mrs. Coo knocked Wright into insensibility and threw him under an automobile driven by Mrs. Martha Clift.

Ex-Rector Here Plans Church

The Rev. Dr. Jeffrey Jennings, former Mt. Washington clergyman and critic of the divorce laws in the United States, is considering establishing a new church, according to word received today from Juarez, Mexico.

He had his marriage to Mrs. Bertha Marie Howells Jennings "Mexicanned" there Saturday on the ground of incompatibility.

An Associated Press dispatch said that Dr. Jennings had left Juarez today for an unannounced destination. Attorney Luis A. Trias was quoted in the dispatch as saying that Jennings may establish a new church.

For many years Dr. Jennings served as rector of the Grace Episcopal Church, Bertha street, Mt. Washington. In 1926 he left here and took charge of the Episcopal Church of the Atonement in Brooklyn.

In an interview in Mexico, Dr. Jennings said he had given up his charge in Brooklyn because his views on divorce differed from that of his church.

DOUG AND MARY DRIVE TO RANCH

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Douglas Fairbanks and his estranged wife, Mary Pickford, went motoring to the actor's Rancho Zorro near San Diego, yesterday.

They spent the morning in the ranch's romantic atmosphere, looking at the tree plantings, the horses and cattle.

They did not discuss the progress of Fairbanks' supposed intermittent wooing of the star.

SUSPECT TRIES SUICIDE IN CELL

Life looked dark to 26-year-old Mike Scarpino, of 708 Wylie avenue, when he was arrested yesterday charged with an $11 holdup in the Hill.

Several hours later, police said, he attempted to end his life by knotting his necktie and handkerchief into a noose and tying one end to a cell bar at Center Avenue station, the other around his neck. A turnkey cut him down.

Today before Magistrate John B. Kearney, Scarpino was held for court, charged with highway robbery. He was pointed out by Jesse Chester, World War veteran, of 219 Washington avenue, Bridgeville, as one of three men who attacked and robbed him, August 23. Scarpino denied the charge.

The youth's mother, Mrs. James Scarpino fainted in the court room. She was carried into the matron's room where she was revived.

KATHRYN SAILS TO ARGENTINE

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Kathryn Ray, the show girl, and her oft-estranged Argentine husband, Macoco Alzaga Unzue, are going to try it again.

Miss Ray sailed for Buenos Aires on the Eastern Prince, saying:

"I'm going back to give Macoco another trial. We've had our spats and we may have more. But I'll try it again."

The show girl and the millionaire Argentine rancher were married last October, separated a few weeks, were reconciled a few days and parted again in March. Miss Ray was asked:

"Do you think he'll behave now?"

MYSTERY WITNESS SOUGHT IN DEATH

Knife Used in Co-Ed Slaying Eludes Searchers

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Undaunted by previous fruitless efforts, officers investigating the slaying of Faye New, Howard College co-ed, again undertook a minute search of the area surrounding the body where the girl was slain in the hope that new clues might be found.

Their work was speeded by the knowledge that the Grand Jury, called in special session to investigate the crime, will meet today and is expected to complete its work in not more than two days.

Rumors, persistent but unconfirmed, continued to tell of a missing witness who could furnish important testimony. One of those directing the investigation said a witness was being sought, but admitted that thus far the search had been unavailing.

Harold Taylor, in county jail charged with murder under a warrant sworn out by the police department, denies he committed the crime, and has stated since he was taken into custody for questioning he did not have a knife when he and Miss New started the automobile ride which ended in her death.

Detectives have sought the knife in vain since the body was discovered in a ditch Wednesday with the throat cut.

Taylor's story remains unshaken after six days of questioning by police. He said that he and Miss New drove out the Irondday-Trussville road, that she jumped from his automobile after an argument, and that she was unharmed when he last saw her.

The grand jury will not investigate the charge of Mrs. Clara Cost that Taylor attempted to attack her six hours before his ride with Miss New. Mrs. Cost swore out a warrant against Taylor.

HORSES SAVED FROM FLAMES ROAM COUNTRYSIDE

Owners on Hunt For Score of Mounts

Owners of some of the 20 blooded horses that escaped a fire which destroyed the Benjamin Carr Riding Stables, near Glenshaw and killed at least 15 mounts, many of them thoroughbreds, were searching today for the animals which raced away after being led from the burning stables.

Flames broke out in the stone and frame structure shortly after midnight yesterday. Carr hurried from his home, less than 100 feet from the building. Assisted by a neighbor, Francis Hamilton, he released many of the plunging, screaming horses from their stalls.

Firemen were unable to check the blaze, and the two men were driven from the stables before completing the rescue work.

Twenty-five of the 46 horses in the barn belonged to Carr. The rest were boarded there for individual owners, most of whom are residents of the exclusive Fox Chapel district.

Carr made no estimate of his loss, nor of the actual number of animals burned, since those released still were being sought. The cause of the blaze has not yet been determined.

WRITER THINKS NAZI OUSTER CRUDE

PARIS, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Mrs. Sinclair Lewis, who as Dorothy Thompson prominent woman was "asked to leave" Germany is going to Saarbrucken Thursday to find out what is going on in the Saar region.

She said today she "would rather be in Vermont" but that she is planning to spend several days in Saarbrucken then go to London and sail for home September 9 on the Leviathan. She said:

"I still have not fathomed why I was kicked out of Germany. But then, it isn't anything other dictators have not done to correspondents. They simply aren't so clever about it in Germany.

The American woman said that in her opinion Germany is becoming the most comfortable and most hygienic prison in the world.

Miss Thompson arrived in Paris yesterday, the day after secret police in Berlin asked her to leave it immediately.

U. S. Not to Protest Dorothy Thompson Ouster

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—State Department officials indicated today no protest against the German government's "invitation" to Dorothy Thompson to leave the country would be made unless she requested it.

Such matters, they said, would be handled by United States representatives abroad. The State Department's policy was described as one of "noninterference" with foreign governments opinions of what Americans should be allowed to remain in those countries.

Lewis Worried Plenty Over Wife's Safety

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Sinclair Lewis was a "mighty worried man," he acknowledge yesterday, until Dorothy Thompson, his wife, arrived safely in Paris from Germany. He said:

"Dorothy's a good newspaperwoman, and she can take care of herself, but I was sure worried until I learned she had reached Paris safely.

"I wasn't worried so much about official action as I was about some patriotic Nazi fanatic. There might have been some youngster who had patriotic ideas, and I—"

He left the sentence unfinished.

HITLER PLEADS FOR SAAR

EHRENBREITSTEIN, Germany, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—The Saar Territory, soon to participate in a momentous plebiscite, had the word of Chancellor Hitler today that "the whole German nation is behind you."

More than half a million persons jammed together here yesterday for a great demonstration of loyalty to the Saar and to give Hitler a tremendous ovation.

It is inevitable, Hitler said, that the Reich region would vote January 13 to return to Germany, in preference to remaining under the mandate of the League of Nations or becoming a part of France. He said this should improve Franco-German relations. He asserted:

"The Saar is the greatest problem now separating France from us. We shall not give up the conviction that the other side eventually will view this problem as it really is and that France will not deny her assistance in solving it."

Caddy Scaling Fence Shot, Farmer Held

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—James McClenmon, 17, a caddy, climbed over a fence from a fee course to retrieve a ball, a shotgun roared out and he fell, wounded in the leg. Police arrested Frank Davidson, a farmer, accused of firing at the youth for trampling on his field.

Shrine to Coolidge Planned in Vermont

PLYMOUTH, Vt., Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Establishment of a shrine in memory of Calvin Coolidge, thirtieth President of the United States, and formation of a society to be known as the Calvin Coolidge Memorial Association was voted here yesterday by more than 10 Vermont men and women.

Boys on Rails No Joke to Engineer

POTTSTOWN, Pa., Aug. 27.—(AP.)—A thundering express train ground to a stop within 50 feet of three boys lying with their heads on the rails.

The boys jumped up, thumbed their noses at the engineer and fled—but not quite fast enough.

It was all a "joke," Donald Rogers, 15, Thomas Ibach, 16, and Charles Jammes, 14, told Squire Otto Moyer and Royersford.

PLANES, BOATS HUNT 2 BOYS

OCEAN CITY, N. J., Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Coast Guard airplanes and cutters and police and volunteers today resumed their search for two little tennys from Yonkers, N. Y., who have been missing since Saturday.

The boys, Royal Hallock, 9, and his 6-year-old brother, Arthur, were last seen wading knee-deep in the surf at the Thirty-second street bathing beach. Officials fear they have drowned.

Last to see the boys was their 9-year-old cousin, Evelyn Rolston. She went with them to the beach Saturday, where they were to be joined by their parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Hallock. After they had played for a time, Evelyn suggested they go back and meet their parents. She left, thinking they would follow. When she looked back, they had disappeared.

HORNETS PATH TO SUICIDE

TAMPA, Fla., Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Death was the goal sought by Ramon Perez, and he attained it by sitting beside in the midst of thousands of hornets.

Their poisonous stings proved fatal to Perez, 34-year-old jobless cigarmaker, last night after hours of agony. His body in some places was swollen to more than twice normal size by the stings.

Perez first attempted to kill himself, his relatives said, by jumping into Hillsborough River. He remained in the water just a few minutes and then swam out—failing to attain his goal by that method.

Later he left his home and went to an adjoining lot which was infested with hornets. There Perez removed his clothing, sat down in the midst of the swarming insects and refused all pleas to come back home.

THEFT SENDING BOY TO COLLEGE

International News Service.

CALEDONIA, Minn., Aug. 27.—It looked today as if a burglary to which he confessed was going to matriculate a 17-year-old high school graduate in the State University.

Arrested on a larceny charge, the youth admitted he had burglarized a school house of $30 in athletic funds.

Then he was given an intelligence quotient test and what was the amazement of his examiners to discover that, far from being subnormal, he had the mentality of a man 45 years old! His test was 300, whereas 100 is about normal.

So, instead of being committed to a penal institution, authorities aim to send him to the university.

Lord, McManus Team In Printing Venture

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Pauline Lord, actress, and George McManus, the cartoonist, are going to publish motion picture manuscripts. They said there is an increasing demand for this literature and they believe they are the first to conceive the idea of meeting this demand. McManus will illustrate many of the 'scripts, he said.

GIRL WHO SEES AFTER 15 YEARS GETS JOB

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Gertrude Moser, 20-year-old girl whose sight was restored recently after 15 years of blindness, made plans today for becoming a full-fledged luxurious woman.

The dreary weeks of idleness following the days when New York made a heroine of Gertrude after her sight returned were ended by her appeal through a newspaper for a job. She said:

"There were scores of answers. I'm going to work in the daytime, sing over the radio at night and see all the ball games week-ends. Could there be anything more wonderful?"

In a little office all her own, Gertrude plans to settle down as saleswoman for a coal company. Already she has worked a day or two, with surprising results. She explained:

"Everyone I've called has given me an order. And the radio engagement is being arranged by a man down the street. Someone else is going to take me to all the professional football games this fall.

"Isn't life marvelous!"

Born Blind, Youth Sees 19 Years After

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Aug. 27.—(Universal)—If you were born blind and after 19 years were suddenly made to see—

David Wamble, 19, of Memphis, had wondered often what of all the amazing things he would see, would most surprise him.

Wamble found it in a very simple thing—the people he had known—when doctors removed from his eyes the cataracts which had blinded him since birth. He said:

"They're all different from what I expected. That is, all but my mother. She looks just like I knew she'd look—sweet and gentle and wonderful.

"I knew mother as soon as I saw her, but I had to wait for the others to speak. You could have knocked me over with a feather when I heard those voices, too.

"I know one fellow, for instance, who had a big deep voice, and I always thought of him as one of the biggest men in town. But when I saw him—say, he's just a little guy. And there was another friend with a squeaky little voice who turned out to be big as all outdoors."

JOHNSON VICTOR IN UPHEAVAL IN NRA

laber on, chairman of a board controlling NRA.

The implications concerning Mr. Richberg and Miss Perkins are less clear. Richberg's friends say he will remain the NRA counsel, although there will be no further doubt that Johnson is boss. Miss Perkins is expected to confine her activities more closely to the Labor Department.

The inside story of the incident, as related to the Associated Press authoritatively, is this:

Relations between Johnson and Richberg, although outwardly friendly, have been undergoing a change over a period of months. Johnson had heard whispers that people were saying it really was Richberg who ruled NRA. On his side, Richberg felt slighted when Johnson last June submitted a reorganization plan to the White House without giving him a copy.

RICHBERG-PERKINS SCHEME

Acting under the President's later authorization to draft a program for general coordination of all recovery activities, Richberg prepared plans of his own for NRA. Miss Perkins became interested, because of the labor angles. Together they saw the President last Monday.

Later that day they were asked to return. Johnson also was present. He told the President bluntly that he felt an effort was being made to drive him out of NRA. There were denials and further words. Finally, Mr. Roosevelt suggested that the General needed a real rest after his unremitting service, and might take a vacation trip abroad, surveying meantime recovery efforts in Europe.

Johnson exploded. He said he would do no such thing and, without ceremony, departed. An hour later Richberg and Miss Perkins slipped out of a side door, evading questioners.

Late that night, just before the President retired, he received a letter from Gen. Johnson, delivered by messenger. It covered three typewritten pages. It recalled Johnson's labors for NRA, paid his respects to his enemies, stated directly his determination to quit, and ended with one of Mr. Roosevelt's own favorite Latin phrases meaning, in free translation, "The situation speaks for itself."

PROVERB FOR PROVERB

The President replied at once. Writing in long-hand, he reiterated his regard and appreciation, asked that the resignation be withdrawn, and, returning proverb for proverb, said he liked that old saying that friends always must be friends.

So matters stood when the President left on Tuesday for Illinois, to attend the funeral of Speaker Rainey. It was because of this undetermined situation that he changed an already-announced plan and returned from Illinois to Washington instead of going straight to Hyde Park.

He saw Johnson again and the break was healed. He did insist, however, that the General take two weeks rest, and Johnson consented and departed for the beach. At the end of the two weeks he will see the President at Hyde Park, and they will settle details of the new NRA setup. And in it the fiery soldier will have first rank.

ONION STRIKERS VOW REVENGE ON 'MOB'

MOUNTAY, O., Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Vigilantes patroled the Scioto marshlands today, pledged to retaliate for strike violence, as an onion workers' union leader, abducted once, dared his enemies to kidnap him again.

Orv Odell, president of the Agriculture Workers' Union, and leader of striking onion marsh weeders, said:

"Let them come. I'd give $100 a head for any who get away alive."

ORGANIZE SECRETLY

Nonstriking onion weeders mustered a "vigilance committee" of 3000 "indignant workers," formed secretly, leaders said, to "retaliate for any further violence," and to rid the community of "undesirable strikers."

Still shed with injuries suffered Saturday when he was snatched from the custody of peace officers and beaten by a group described as "nonunion sympathizers," Odell insisted he would ask federal prosecution today of the men who mistreated him.

The strike leader asserted he has furnished an agent of the Department of Justice with the names of 45 men he suspects were in the group which seized him and drove 14 miles from this tiny community to administer the beating. He can supply the names of 40 other men, he said.

U. S. MEDIATOR WAITED

But whether action could be obtained under the so-called "Lindbergh" kidnap law remained undetermined.

Robert Fox, a federal labor conciliator, has been ordered here by Secretary of Labor Perkins to broach a settlement of the three-month old strike, which has been punctuated by violence.

Hot Dogs Beat Legion, Peer Decides

LONDON, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Lord Edward Montagu, second son of the Duke of Manchester, is running a hot dog stand and making money, the Daily Express said today.

He started business at Maidenhead, famous Thames riverside resort, on Saturday with £1 (about $5) in stock and said he made £4 within 24 hours. He sells hot dogs, coffee, soft drinks and sandwiches.

Lord Edward, who is 28, said he hopes to start a chain of stands. He said:

"I think this is better than the French Foreign Legion."

Early this month he went to France to join the Foreign Legion, but changed his mind at the last minute.

MINER SLAIN IN UNION WAR

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Aug. 27.—(AP.)—A new outbreak of hostilities between two miners' organizations is blamed by police for the slaying of Steve Mosanko, 56, of Juniata.

Police are holding Richard Kirby, 35, alleged to have shot Mosanko early yesterday as he said, the latter was attempting to ignite an 18-stick dynamite bomb at the rear of Kirby's home.

Kirby was quoted in investigators as saying he had been threatened several times for refusal to withdraw from the Miners' Bloodhound and join the United Mine Workers of America.

Kirby said he fired at Mosanko after being aroused by the squealing of pigs in the pen yard of his home. He said Mosanko was lighting matches in a heavy wind in an effort to ignite the fuse.

ACTOR BOSSING 'MOB' SLAIN

International News Service

YONKERS, N. Y., Aug. 27.—A murder in which the notorious Yonkers dock gang took the life of a wise-cracking bystander who tried to set himself up as their dictator, today provided police with a real-life mystery thriller such as John Edwards delighted to whom he was a Hollywood motion picture director.

But Edwards will never put the "operator" on the screen. He was the man who was slain.

Police said Edwards strode into the mob's headquarters and stood on a table to declare:

"You fellows need a leader with brains. I've got the brains. So I'm boss from now on."

A man known only as "Gorilla" Cucinello is alleged to have punched Edwards, who struck his head on a chair.

CHAINS PLEDGE NO GOUGING

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Co-operation of 23,000 stores was pledged to President Roosevelt today in his efforts to prevent food profiteering in the wake of the drought.

In a telegram to President Roosevelt, F. H. Massman of Chicago, president of the Association of Food and Grocery Chain Stores of America, said:

"It gives me pleasure to compliment you and your administration in its endeavor to protect the consumer against unwarranted price advances.

"The members of our association will individually cooperate and continue to give to the consuming public the benefit of economical mass distribution which in itself aids both the consumer and the producer, particularly enabling a fair market price to be realized by the agricultural industry."

Recently the association promised to adopt Agricultural Department standards for labelling of canned foods.

Last week, the National Food and Grocery Distributors code authority, representing 6,000 food wholesalers and jobbers and 350,000 retailers, pledged President Roosevelt its support and co-operation of trade associations in protecting the public "against unwarranted, unfair or unreasonable prices."

4,120,000 Jobs Attributed to NRA Codes

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt has received a report saying employment has increased 4,120,000 since he took office.

The document, submitted by Donald R. Richberg as head of the executive council, also cites figures to show a substantial business advance and declares that in this improvement NRA was a "dominant influence." The report stated:

"Reliable figures indicate that 40,180,000 persons were employed in the United States in June, 1934, an increase of 4,120,000 over the low figures of March, 1933, and an increase of 2,320,000 over June, 1933. The latter increase is due mainly to shortening of hours under NRA codes."

The report said the purchasing power of the average worker in manufacture remained practically unchanged, but that there was an average reduction of six hours in the industrial work week. It declared many small businesses had been saved from failure, larger industries stabilized and corporation profits increased.

TEXTILE STRIKE PLANS SPREAD

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—The strike committee of the United Textile Workers, with plans completed for a general strike in the cotton textile industry on September 4, today began preparations for a similar walkout in the silk, rayon and woolen industries.

Francis J. Gorman, chairman of the strike committee, said it was "highly possible" that the walkout of silk, woolen and rayon workers would be simultaneous with the cotton strike.

The committee said today it would advance the exact strike hour on Thursday. Other sources, however, disclosed that secret instructions already in the hands of regional leaders, called for a general stoppage of work at midnight Friday.

Inasmuch as the industry is operating on a five-day week, with mills closed on Saturday, September 1, and Monday (Labor Day), September 3, the walkout will not become actually effective until September 4.

Peace Pact Looms In Copper Strike

BUTTE, Mont., Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Agreements looking toward settlement of the prolonged strike in the Anaconda Copper Company's mines and plants were reported today to have been approved by a large majority of the crafts involved.

Details of the agreement were not disclosed, but it was reported to provide for an advance of 50 cents in the daily wage scale. The strikers walked out May 8 at the Butte, Anaconda and Great Falls plants.

Hotel Union Chief Threatens Strike

BOSTON, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—A nation-wide strike of hotel workers was threatened here today if code authorities in Washington change the existing code by eliminating the day off in seven.

John J. Kearney, acting president of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes' International Alliance and the Bartenders' League of America, in a telegram to the Hotel and Code Authority, issued the strike threat, saying 70,000 workers would immediately walk out.

ROOSEVELT HAS PICNIC LUNCH

WARWICK, N. Y., Aug. 27.—(AP.)—On the banks of a lake near here President and Mrs. Roosevelt stopped at noon today for a picnic luncheon.

Motoring through New York state, the President inspected the Wallkill Prison and then the State Training School here. He inquired closely of the heads of the two modern correction institutions about conditions for the inmates.

State police guarded the Presidential party to permit seclusion in the open for the picnic. Mrs. Roosevelt had preared luncheon in advance.

After lunch the President headed for the West Point Military Academy. A bright sun and cool breeze provided an ideal day for the outing. Folks along the route waved a greeting.

Miner Swept to Death by Wind

Swept from the top of an 80-foot tipple by a high wind, Fritz Hardt, 35, of Pittsburgh, was killed at the Gage coal mine, Unionvale, Mich., according to word received here.

RADIO-PHONE SAVES CAPTAIN

LORAIN, O., Aug. 27.—(AP.)—The new ship-to-shore radio telephone system was used today to obtain treatment for a ship captain injured in a fall aboard his boat in Lake Superior.

Capt. E. R. Morton, of Cleveland, suffered a broken nose and a possible fractured skull early today when he fell down a companion way leading from the pilot house to his cabin.

The ship was ploughing through the waters of Lake Superior, bound for Duluth with coal. A woman passenger on the boat volunteered to nurse the captain, who was unconscious after the fall.

She called the land station here and was connected with Dr. A. T. Grills, who advised her how to stop the bleeding from a cut on the captain's head. Later the ship's telephone was connected with a hospital at Marquette, Mich., and a request was made to have an ambulance and a doctor at the dock there.

Schall Renews Charges Of Press Censorship

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Senator Schall (Rep.), of Minnesota, has reiterated in another letter to President Roosevelt that the administration seeks to censor the press. The President earlier had denied such a charge in a telegram to Schall declaring that "the incident is closed." Schall said:

"Your conclusion to me that the 'incident is closed' will in no way, Mr. President, satisfy the people of their fear of where you are unconstitutionally steering their Republic."

The Minnesotan said recently the administration was considering establishment of a national press service to take the place of existing news agencies and "to have exclusive use of all government news and be in a position to give its service only to those newspapers loyal to the Roosevelt dictatorship."

The President then sent Schall a telegram saying that "as any such plan would be contrary to the administration's policy, I requested you with the utmost politeness to give me the facts behind your charges."

Replying to this telegram, Schall's letter said:

"If you desire specific information as the basis of my reasonable inference, that the government is about to co-ordinate its various and sundry publicity functions into a national press service, you have only to assemble the following 'makings' thereof:

"The White House daily statements * * *.

"The press code, which aims to dominate the publishers * * *.

"The Rayburn communications act, controlling radio, telegraph, cable and telephone communication * * *.

"Your control of the business offices of the press by government investment of $1,000,000,000 in the preferred shares of over 6,000 banks" * * *.

13 STATES HOLD PRIMARIES TOMORROW

Associated Press.

Primaries will be held tomorrow in California, Mississippi and South Carolina.

Senator Hiram Johnson, Republican Independent supporter of President Roosevelt, is generally rated the winner of both Democratic and Republican nominations for Senator in California.

The Democratic race for the gubernatorial nomination, however, in which Upton Sinclair, former Socialist, is a prominent candidate, has administration leaders worried. They fear that if he is nominated, the reaction among old-line Democrats might bring defeat of the 11 Democratic House members in November.

Senator Hubert Stephens, up for Democratic renomination in Mississippi, has three opponents—former Gov. Theodore G. Bilbo and Representative Ross Collins and State Senator Frank Harper. The nomination is equivalent to election.

South Carolina does not elect a Senator this year, but will nominate several Congressmen, Governor and other state officers. Here, too, nomination is tantamount to election.

REIGN OF JIM, 'MA' NEAR END

DALLAS, Tex., Aug. 27.—(AP)—The once mighty power that James E. Ferguson exercised in Texas politics for nearly two decades appeared definitely on the wane today.

The latest blow to the former Governor came in the Democratic run-off primary for the gubernatorial nomination with the victory of James V. Allred, 35-year-old Attorney General, over Tom F. Hunter, who had the backing of Ferguson and his wife, Gov. Miriam (Ma) Ferguson.

In the first primary the Fergusons had supported C. C. McDonald, who ran third.

Latest returns of Saturday's balloting gave Allred 481,520 votes to 434,593 for Hunter, attorney—oil man, and a neighbor of the victor in Wichita Falls. The Democratic nomination in Texas is tantamount to election.

BUSINESS LEVY FOUGHT IN N. Y.

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—The city's organized business groups were prepared to storm City Hall today in protest against the proposed tax of one-half of 1 per cent on gross business incomes.

Grover A. Whalen, chairman of the sales tax committee of 1,000, which has led the fight on the proposed levy, was reported ready to propose a general sales tax as an alternate measure to raise funds for unemployment relief.

The tax measure, sponsored by Mayor LaGuardia and already passed by the Board of Estimate, is now before the Board of Aldermen, which is due to vote on the tax tomorrow.

Alderman Lambert Fairchild, sponsor of the proposal to put a two-cent tax on subway fares, called for proponents and opponents of the subway tax, as well as of the gross business tax, to appear at today's hearing. He said he would demand that both proposals be given consideration.

NEW BRIGHTON, Pa., Aug. 27.—Missing for 16 days, J. Simon, 63, of Conway, was found dead yesterday near the Conway railroad yard offices. His neck was broken.

The authorities believe the man slipped and fell down the steep hillside while he was picking berries on August 11.

The body, which had landed on a ledge on the hillside, was found by a group of small boys who were climbing over the hill yesterday.

COLEMAN BOLTS CANDIDACY OF STEEDLE

practices of a certain type of Republican politician. He pointed out that he could go no further than the repudiation of Steedle, neither the law nor party rules permitting him to force the candidate from the ticket.

The Independent Republican Committee, of which William B. McFall is chairman, will meet tomorrow and is expected to take action similar to that announced by Coleman today.

COLEMAN STATEMENT

In his statement Coleman said:

"When on Thursday last I publicly stated that I would not advocate the cutting of the ticket I had in mind the effect it might have on the other candidates throughout Allegheny County rather than the interest of Dr. Steedle. I realize that the cutting of Dr. Steedle may seriously affect other candidates in his district and this I would wish to avoid.

"Since conferring with Dr. Steedle I have given very careful thought to his position, but in view of the fact that since he was nominated a jury has found him guilty of an offense involving the purity of the ballot, and the court has imposed sentence on that verdict, I am convinced that the doctor should voluntarily withdraw.

ADVISES STEEDLE

"Failing to do so, as Republican county chairman, I cannot in good conscience ask the public to give him support.

"I have this day written Dr. Steedle setting forth my views, embodying in part the sentiments here expressed. I have no power under the law or the rules of the party to force Dr. Steedle from the ticket. He alone can save his party and fellow candidates embarrassment. If he persists in remaining on the ticket he alone must assume the responsibility."

Steedle has been a member of the Legislature for more than 20 years and is chairman of the Appropriations Committee of the House. He was convicted in Federal Court and sentenced to two years for conspiracy to falsify ballots in the election of 1932. He has an appeal pending.

FISH EXHIBITION OPENS IN PARK

The sixth annual fish exhibit of Allegheny Aquarist Association at Phipps Conservatory, Schenley Park, will be held through Labor Day, it was announced, it opened yesterday.

This year's exhibit features, among 60 different specimens of fish, a type known to fish fanciers for its peculiar breeding habits.

It as a four-inch, richly colored specie, called a cichlid. When the cichlid eggs are laid the parent fish take turns fanning the eggs continuously for seven days. After the 200-odd brood is hatched, the parents carefully scoop out a pit in the tank's bottom each night, and put their young to bed, standing guard outside.

Among the other finny exhibits is the Beta and Siamese fighting fish, and the Mollie. The latter possesses the singular ability of changing its sex.

CITIES FACING RELIEF LOAD

be effective for a considerable period.

County Must Boost Taxes To Meet Relief Needs

Allegheny County won't be able to take on heavy relief costs without a boost in taxes.

County officials made this reply today in answer to intimations from Washington that cities and counties may be called upon to put up Pennsylvania's share of direct relief costs pending action at the regular session of the Legislature.

County Statistician Nicholas Stabile declared that the county's total bonding margin now is $70,000,000, of which $9,000,000 can be issued by the Commissioners without a vote of the people.

He declared, however, that the county now is paying out approximately 75 cents of each dollar of tax funds to meet the interest on and reduce the principal of $105,000,000 in outstanding bonds.

So, Stabile declared, more bonds certainly will mean more taxes.

Barton's Girl Hurt, Fear Back Broken

PUTNAM, Conn., Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Betsy Barton, 16-year-old daughter of Bruce Barton, the author, suffered a possible broken back last night in an automobile accident near here.

Her brother, Randall, 18, and E. J. Bullard of Providence, R. I., suffered minor cuts and bruises as an automobile driven by Miss Barton left the highway on a sharp curve.

Huey Got Black Eye Just One Year Ago

SANDS POINT, N. Y., Aug. 27.—(AP.)—The hitting of Huey Long is now a year-old mystery.

It was on August 26, 1933, that the Louisiana Senator emerged from a party at the Sands Point Bath Club with a discolored eye. His assailant, or assailants, never have been publicly identified.

Wives Devote Busy Hours Guarding Film Stars From Ardent Admirers

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 25.—(AP.)—If the enamored feminine correspondents of movie actors knew how many of their wives answer their "fan mail" they might not write so ardently.

Yet letter answering is only one of the self-imposed duties of movie wives in "protecting" their husbands. And this attitude of protection is quite widespread around here.

GRACIE ALLEN
". . . I'm Marlene Dietrich . . ."

MRS. JIMMY DURANTE
. . . she gave a fake name . . .

Bores must not be allowed to confer husbands at parties. Agents must not get to them by telephone. Nor must crafty salesmen be allowed to establish ambush around the premises, as was the case recently at Edward G. Robinson's home. Mrs. Robinson was the first to espy the salesman and the chauffeur shooed him away.

There is one case in which a wife cunningly fended off possible bodily harm for her husband. Mrs. Harold Lloyd saved the comedian from a mob of fans outside a London hotel on a European tour by leading the crowd to think they would leave by one door, while they slipped out another. Mrs. Lloyd feared the crowd was too excited to be gentle in its adoration.

Knowing both social and professional angles, Sandra Shaw is a great aid to Gary Cooper. She sees to it that his social engagements are only those to his liking, and knows just whom he should see in a business way. Jobyna Arlen has developed a telephone technique calculated to deliver husband Richard from many an ordeal.

Mrs. Eddie Cantor is prepared to temper Eddie's impromptu party plans with discretion. The comedian goes around the studio lot, picking up dinner guests as he goes.

Mrs. Cantor enjoys the parties, too, and when Eddie telephones "15 roast chickens instead of five, mamma," she usually says O. K. But sometimes this happens when Eddie has another engagement, and then it is up to Mrs. Cantor to get things straightened out.

Robert Woolsey's wife is a special monitor of his diet and Mrs. Leo Carrillo handles the family's money. Despite this, however, Carillo managed to build his Santa Monica Canyon Rancho home as a surprise for her, while she was in the East, cajoling odd sums from her on various pretexts.

Gracie Allen has a novel way of protecting her comedy partner husband, George Burns, from autograph hunters. She relates:

"When they begin to swarm around him, I say to them, 'Now listen—he isn't anybody at all, only my chauffeur. Me, now—I'm Marlene Dietrich.' And they all get my autograph and let George alone."

Then, there is one they tell about Mrs. Jimmy Durante, who is always trying to protect Jimmy from the persons who over-charge movie celebrities. She saw something both wanted in an auction sale place. She bought the article but gave a fictitious name with the right address for delivery. The clerk chortled:

"That's all right, we'll see that you get it, Mrs. Durante."

It was Mrs. Paul Muni who, as her actor husband's representative, made the deal through which he came back to pictures after an unhappy first experience in Hollywood. He left the matter in her hands and went into seclusion. She attends to most business matters for him, in fact.

DUKE'S EX-WIFE AGAIN BOSS OF CASTLE

By LAURENCE MEIER
(Universal News Service)

OXFORD, England, Aug. 27.—The young Duke of Marlborough and the Dowager Duchess of Marlborough have agreed on one thing: that the Dowager, in spite of her rights in that direction, is never to return to Blenheim Castle, the family seat, it was learned today.

That, and her present inclination for solitude, accounts for the Dowager Duchess, who was Gladys Deacon, of Boston, living with her 40 dogs, all spaniels, in a sequestered farmhouse near Mixbury.

It also accounts for the fact that the tall, willowy mother of the Duke, the former Consuelo Vanderbilt, who was once the Duchess herself, again rules the Marlborough menage, which at present happens to be a shooting box in Scotland.

The dowager's sequestration at Mixbury was entirely voluntary and began after her row with her husband, the ninth Duke of Marlborough, but stepmother and stepson never developed any affection for one another, it was learned from a source well informed as to the affairs of both.

The new duke, although recognizing the widow's right to reside in Blenheim, is secretly pleased at the present arrangement. The lack of affection was emphasized recently by friends of the duke who went out of their way to deny flatly that Gladys Deacon was a bridesmaid at the most famous of transatlantic weddings when the 18-year-old Consuelo became the wife of the far older duke in 1895 while a disapproving but fascinated America looked on.

Blenheim today is bustling with preparations for the tenth duke to take up his residence there for the first time since his father's death, a few months ago.

The young duke is at Strathavon Lodge, Scotland, for the grouse shooting, with Consuelo.

MUSIC LEADERS GREET NEGRO COMPOSERS

Schenley High School Auditorium was crowded yesterday afternoon to welcome officers and delegates to the convention of the National Association of Negro Musicians. Mary Caldwell Dawson was chairman of the meeting and opened it with a rousing appeal to her fellow workers towards the career of the Negro artist.

Mr. Lindfelt

Harvey B. Gaul was guest of honor and speaker. He reviewed Negro activities in the field of Pittsburg's art during his residence here, gave a history of the rise of the Negro spiritual and his own enjoyment in its favor, made a healthy criticism of Pittsburgh as an art center and the Negro as one of its contributors, and then brought a most sincere word of encouragement to the Negro artist.

The business of the day was welcoming the delegates and national officer. The Rev. Cassius Ward spoke the invocation. Attorney Homer Brown spoke in behalf of the citizens, Richard Jones for the Business and Professional Men's Association, Mrs. David Lambert said her welcome in the name of the Federation of Woman's Clubs, the Rev. Hatcher for the churches, and Herbert T. Miller, executive secretary for the Y. M. C. A., for the social agencies. Attorney Leroy Godman, of Columbus, O., responded to the various speakers.

J. Wesley Jones, who has just directed the Negro choirs at the Chicago Fair, directed the Pittsburgh Mass Choir in "Deep River," and their Pittsburgh leader, Lawrence Peeler, led them in the spiritual, "Mary Don't You Weep."

Gertrude E. Johnson, lyric soprano, sang the prayer song, "Nobles Seigneur," from Meyerbeer's "Huguenots" and a spiritual, "Stand Still, Jordaan." August Brice, of Cleveland, sang "Hard Trials" and "Weighed in de Water." Carl Dilon, of New York, played accompaniments. There was an organ prelude by Leroy Terry, of St. Louis. The Negro national hymn, a fine bit of music, opened the meeting.

During the week there will be many conferences and concerts each evening at Schenley High School, culminating in the artist's program Thursday night. The public is admitted to these concerts.

2 BOSSES SLAIN ON PLANTATION

CHARLESTON, Mo., Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Errand citizens and officers scoured the hills of Southeast Missouri today hunting an itinerant Negro cotton picker accused of slaying two white men, plantation overseers at Wolf Island, a Mississippi River settlement south of here.

The white men, Jess Cofer and his nephew Dan Cofer, both employes at the Tyronza plantation, were shot to death late Saturday as they watched a dance at the home of a Negro tenant. Four frightened Negroes walked to the plantation store three hours later and told their story of the shooting, accusing Mose Hurley, a new employe.

The four Negro witnesses were brought to jail here as material witnesses. From them officers learned a quarrel had preceded the shooting.

By the time other plantation officers and county authorities reached the tenant house Hurley and his brother, at whose home the shooting occurred, had fled. A widespread search was organized immediately but no trace of the Negroes could be found.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at drug stores. ©1931 C. M. Co.

FLOOD CONTROL PROJECT SET FOR FALL

Complete plans and specifications for the $12,000,000 Tygart River reservoir, main unit of flood control project in the Pittsburgh district, will be issued about September 15, according to an announcement by Maj. W. D. Styer, head of the Pittsburgh office of the United States Army Engineers.

The Flood Commission of Pittsburgh was largely instrumental in obtaining funds for the dam, the key project in the vast Pittsburgh flood control plan.

With $10,800,000 already allotted for the project by the Public Works Administration, work probably will get under way this fall. Bids are scheduled for about October 15.

36-MONTH JOB

The dam will be built on the Tygart River about two miles above Grafton, W. Va. It will take about 36 months to complete it. Hundreds of men will be given jobs.

The dam, which will be one of the highest in the East, will hold in check about 327,000-acre feet of water and the reservoir will cover about 3,800 acres.

Each year, about January 1, the reservoir will be virtually empty. If there is a flow danger at any time the water will be stored and released when the danger is over.

During the summer and fall dry season, it is planned to release water gradually in order to maintain plenty of water in Monongahela River locks.

SANITATION AID

Besides preventing floods and aiding navigation, the dam will reduce acidity in the river water and improve sanitation.

Prof. Harold A. Thomas, head of the hydraulic laboratory at Carnegie Institute of Technology, built a model of the dam in order to study the washing effect of the water falling down the dam into the pool below.

Meanwhile, Congressman Nathan L. Strong, of Brookville, Pa., and Leon H. Gavin, Republican nominee for Congress in the Twentieth District, are encouraging a campaign to obtain flood control funds for the Allegheny Valley.

Perpetual Public Works Program Urged by Ickes

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—A perpetual public works program involving the expenditure of a half billion dollars yearly is advocated by Secretary Ickes.

According to word in the capital, he has administration support in this far-flung design.

Ickes' belief is said to be that, no matter what the economic necessity chances to be, the United States should carry on a continuous building program.

At the present time about 700,000 workers are directly employed on public works and $40,000,000 weekly in federal funds is going into construction.

Some observers with a penchant for comparisons have figured out that if all the dollars thus far allotted in the recovery program were laid end to end they would stretch 14 times around the world.

Many of the projects will require four to five years for completion. This, it is believed, puts the government in the position of having caught the bull by the tail and of being unable to let go; for originally the public works program was undertaken as a mere stop gap until industry recovered.

In a recent speech in which he informed the nation of the progress of the fight on depression, Secretary Ickes said:

"From Alaska to the Panama Canal, from the Virgin Islands to Hawaii, the public works program is at work with dirt flying."

SOCIETY GIRL, ACTOR ELOPE

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Onslow Stevens, stage and screen actor, and Miss Phyllis Cooper, society debutante and prominent in amateur theatricals, were married yesterday in Yuma, Ariz., they advised the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John T. Cooper.

Mrs. Cooper said:

"It was an elopement, but they most certainly have our blessing."

Stevens, who is 32 years old, received his theatrical training at the Pasadena Playhouse and appeared in numerous stage productions before entering motion pictures. Among his films were "Radio Patrol," "Once in a Lifetime," "Nagana" and "Peg o' My Heart."

Whitaker to Hold Rally Against Taxes

BIG SUM SUITS OFTEN NEVER REACH TRIAL

By MILTON V. BURGESS

Some of the biggest and most picturesque controversies involving millions of dollars have been settled out of court and the public has heard nothing of them.

The courts of Pittsburgh are now full of cases which will never come to trial but will be settled by negotiation.

In addition there are many important disputes that are settled in attorneys' offices without suits being filed.

While the trial lawyers agree that proper presentation of a case before a jury is highly important, most of them say that a case is rarely won or lost in the preparation.

SPEED HEARINGS

The matter of settlement applies largely to civil cases.

Settlement is also possible, for some of the jammy offenses in Criminal Court with the district attorney's sanction. Big criminal cases, however, are usually felonies and in these there is no possibility of negotiation.

Common Pleas Court handles the bulk of the important civil actions that come to trial.

At present that court is running about 22 months behind. The court has speeded up a little since the first of the year. For a while, more than two years passed before a case came to trial.

MILLIONS FOR GAS

Where these legal fights are between corporations, fantastic sums of money are sometimes involved.

Recently a suit brought by the Davison Coke and Iron Company against the Manufacturers Light and Heat Company was settled by an agreement, which, it is reported, involved the payment of about $500,000 in cash by the latter company and additional payments which over a period of years will amount to millions of dollars.

The Davison Company sued to obtain performance of a contract which it had with the gas company for the sale of the gas produced in the by-product ovens on Neville Island.

The gas company contended that as a corporation engaged in public service it might modify the terms of a contract that it deemed disadvantageous.

Thorp, Bostwick, Stewart and Reed and Moorhead and Knox were attorneys for the Davison Company.

ROMANCE IN OIL

One of the most colorful investigations, which would probably have remained a secret had the settlement not been for an estate and required the approval of the court, was made in 1927 by Attorney O. K. Eaton in connection with the claim of the John G. McCaskey estate against L. H. Wentz, Oklahoma oil man.

Wentz and McCaskey had been partners in the oil fields and on June 3, 1924, Wentz had taken steps to take over the deceased McCaskey's share in the properties for $1,800,000.

While this price was supported by appraisals and by similar sales of oil property in adjacent fields, the executors of the McCaskey will became suspicious that they had not been told all concerning the true value of the properties.

After a petition to the court, Eaton was appointed to investigate. He went to Oklahoma and, after delving about in the government's geological records, noted a valuable well in the Blackwell field, location of the former McCaskey holdings, which had apparently come in just before Wentz had acquired the McCaskey property.

FIGURES FORCE SETTLEMENT

As the value of the well itself was estimated at between $750,000 and $1,000,000, Eaton started to find out about it. Wentz declined to reveal the company's production figures.

Later, however, Wentz brought the production records to Pittsburgh, and Eaton was able to pick out the date of the new well. It was four days prior to the option extension.

In view of the disclosure, a settlement was reached involving the payment of $993,000 additional to the estate.

To illustrate the value of a quick settlement, a case in which Attorney Charles J. Margiotti figured in Elks County is apt.

ESTATE SHRINKS

An estate was worth at the death of a father, approximately $300,000. During a period of years it had increased to about $1,000,000. Then the heirs of a second wife entered into litigation with a son who, represented by Margiotti, contended that the estate was a life estate with the power to consume.

The court's decision required that the son be paid $300,000 in cash for his share of the estate. Both sides prepared to appeal but finally settled on that basis. In the meantime, the value of the estate, because of the collapse of the security markets, had shrunk to $350,000.

McKeesport Man Poisons, Shoots Self

Shortly after he took poison in his home, Joseph Wazsak, 51, of 1239 Market street, McKeesport, shot himself in the head in the cellar of his home, the morgue reported. He died on arrival at McKeesport Hospital.

Police said he tried to end his life by shooting a year ago, but received only a flesh wound when members of his family interfered.

Child Asks Bar Association For Common Sense Report on Probe of Curtailment of Courts

By RICHARD WASHBURN CHILD

Noted Author, Diplomat and Former U. S. Ambassador to Italy

COMMON SENSE WANTED:

Everyone knows that the American Bar Association in 1932 appointed a special committee to investigate and report on the extent to which EXECUTIVE OR BUREAUCRATIC ORDERS BY GOVERNMENT COULD BE ENFORCED WITHOUT PRACTICAL MEANS OF APPEAL TO THE COURTS OF JUSTICE.

MR. CHILD

Everyone knows that 1932 was before the New Deal had been begun.

Hence, it cannot be said that the American Bar Association was after the scalp of those particular advisers to the President who like to see the power of decree operate without any chance for appeal to the courts.

Everyone knows that administrative government all over the world is being forced by necessity into a position of prominence—BUT—EVERYONE KNOWS THAT WHEN REGULATIONS BY A BUREAUCRACY REPLACE GOVERNMENT BY LAW, LIBERTY FLITS OUT THE WINDOW.

NOW the committee report of the American Bar Association, after nearly two years of study, indicates clearly enough that liberty, as guaranteed by our system of courts and of justice, is at least as far as the window-sill.

ADMITTING that emergency, whether of war or of great stress, requires executive orders, what COMMON SENSE WANTS NOW TO KNOW IS WHAT THE BAR ASSOCIATION, WITHOUT THE HELP OF POLITICAL PULL OR WHITEWASH OR PUSSY FEET, SAYS AS TO WHETHER OUR CONSTITUTIONAL GUARANTEES AGAINST CZAR-BUREAUCRACY ARE BEING THREATENED.

If the government, no matter whether in the last two years or the last 10 years or the last 30 years, is going toward the place where it can paste a red label on every man's forehead and snatch that label off, and in practice make a pariah of anybody or boycott anybody—WITHOUT APPEAL—the day has come when liberty, America, the old United States, our form of civilization and freedom as to whom you can marry or how you brush your teeth, is OUT THE WINDOW.

That question, and that question only, is before the Bar Association so far as the interests of the people are concerned.

IT is often said, justly or unjustly, that the two kinds of men who can smother common sense in a shroud of words are lawyers and politicians.

In this case, the country wants no shroud of words.

In this case, the country wants to know the instances where departmental or commission or administrative demi-czars have issued orders and inflicted penalties for disobedience from those who have no appeal to neutral justice—TO THE COURTS.

In this case, the country wants to know whether law, with a court review, is to be replaced, as in some of the dictatorships of Russia and of Europe by the kind of government which can deprive a man of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness if he does not say "uncle" or jump through a bureaucratic hoop.

The Bar Association started to answer this question in the days of Hoover.

It is not necessarily any reflection on the New Deal to answer the question now, with, out whitewash or partiality.

COURTS REPORT BIG INCREASE IN CASES HEARD

Reports submitted by Jack Moore, chief clerk of Common Pleas Court, to the judges of that tribunal show that during the first six months of this year 1,945 cases were disposed of as against 1,188 during the same months the previous year—a gain of 677.

The report also revealed that a total of 780 divorce cases were heard during that period, as against 617 the previous year—a gain of 171. These figures represent an increase of approximately 64 per cent in the number of cases disposed of during the first six months, as against the same period in 1933.

At the present time there are 4,001 cases waiting to be disposed of. On January 1, 1933, there were 5,886 showing that in 18 months the list has been reduced 1,885 in that period, with the greatest reduction made so far this year.

Jury trial will start September 10, at which time 11 judges will be assigned to hear cases, including two visiting judges, in order to speed up the clearing of the list. Judge Andrew B. Reid, president judge, has assigned Thomas F. Bailey of Huntingdon, and Ray P. Sherwood, of York, to sit in Pittsburgh that week.

It was learned that the judges are not unmindful of the agitation to have more business disposed of during the summer months and considerable headway in that direction was made the present year. It is contended that if lawyers would agree to have cases disposed of by a judge, instead of by jury trial, which would be much cheaper for the taxpayers, the list might be greatly reduced in the summer months.

WIDER RADIO CONTROL SEEN

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Additional regulation of communications affecting the "character, quality and quantity" of radio broadcasting service was predicted today in a report discussed by an American Bar Association committee.

The association's committee on communications, which forecast last year passage of legislation creating a Federal Communications Commission well in advance of the introduction of the Dill-Rayburn bill, will present its report to the association convention which opens here tomorrow.

Explaining the expected changes in regulations will evolve from the requirement that the commission submit to Congress recommendations for new legislation on all phases of its activity, the report says "the commercial consequences of the commission's regulations will be far-reaching, but in all probability the social consequences will be even greater."

River Cable Car Drops, Five Missing

REVELSTOKE, B. C., Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Believed to have drowned when a cable carrying a little-used passenger cage across the Columbia River snapped and plunged them into the water, the bodies of five young men were sought in the stream today.

The five, relief camp workers, and one man who swam to shore, Blondie Mason, had been testing the cage yesterday on their day off.

SON ON TRIAL IN SHACK DEATH

FRANKLIN, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Before a crowded courtroom, 21-year-old Walter Witherup went on trial today in Circuit Court, charged with slaying his father, Clark N. Witherup, 51-year-old oil lease operator.

District Attorney Maurice P. Breene said he might not press a first-degree murder charge against the youth, as selection of a jury began. He said residents of Southern Venango County, scene of the slaying, likely will not be accepted for the jury panel.

The elder Witherup was slain on December 9. The body was found later in the channel of a creek many miles from the scene of his shack on an oil lease where the killing is alleged to have taken place.

Witherup watched the court proceedings calmly. Near him sat his counsel, Attorneys John and Gerald McGill, of Oil City, and Forest B. Irwin and John F. Budke, of Franklin.

'BILLY BATCHELOR' RETURNS TO AIR

Oil Jubilee On Chain Today

Bouncing into the radio waves tonight with a new deal of troubles comes Ray Knight's "Billy Batchelor," that ragging young small-town newspaper publisher who answers to "Papa" for twins.

Knight, who "Bills" most of the time but "Washington Watts," man of all work, and Mr. Perkins, the druggist, every once in awhile, too, will be on the air five times weekly in the new series, to be wafted via NBC-red and WCAE. The time is 6:45.

Supporting the comedian, as usual, will be Alice Davenport, "Mrs. Billy" and associate editor of Billy's newspaper, and Bobby Jordan and Emily Vass, juveniles, as the troublesome twins, "Peter" and "Pan."

The NBC spotlight focuses on Titusville for an hour and a half relay of ceremonies today marking the seventy-fifth anniversary of the world's first oil well. Slated for 4:30 with WCAE carrying, the broadcast includes addresses by Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, Gov. Pinchot, Gov. George White, of Ohio, and Axtell J. Byles, president, American Petroleum Institute.

JOE'S THREAT

Joe Cook threatens to keep his threat tonight—that is, all his talk of bringing acrobatic trappings into the studio to play with while on the air may have some weight, after all.

Joe Cook

Anyway, Joe swears up and down that when you hear him tonight he'll be balancing before the mike atop a rubber ball. He wanted to bring his tight rope and juggling pins, too, but the moguls said no. . .

* * *

A solo by Robert Dolesji on his viol d'amour, an instrument popular in the Sixteenth Century, will feature the WCAE 10 p. m. bill. . .

"Proud Lady," a racetrack play, is booked for KDKA at 9:30. . .

WWVA's weekly Tri-State Salute has Pittsburgh taking a bow tonight . . . 9 p. m.

Joe Sartory takes over the WWSW Show Shopper reins today so Walt Framer can hie to N. Y. to see what's doing in the big town movie factories. . .

Husk O'Hare moves into that night club which last week brought Ozzie Nelson — and started out to bring Austin Wylie —to this sector. He'll do a nightly over KQV. . .

Col. C. C. McGovern, county commissioners' chairman, speaks over KDKA at 8:45, his talk marking the eve of the second annual county fair opening. . .

AERIAL PREVUE

Predictions are that the Peabody High School a Capella Choir will do a weekly series for CBS this fall, fed to the net by WJAS. . . .

Jim Hughes, WJAS program director, is lining up local stars for waftings from the station's county fair studio this week. Grace Walters and the Barnyard Frolics are booked for the early p. m. tomorrow with Baron Elliott taking the air at 7. . . .

Jeanne Aubert, Chic Sale, Lou Holtz and Val and Ernie Stanton will be Rudy's guests Thursday night. . . .

Thelma Todd guests on "Forty-five Minutes In Hollywood" via CBS the same night. . . .

Cissie Loftus' scheduled and canceled appearance last week with Everett Marshall is rebooked for this Wednesday. . . .

A preview of the present-day motion picture trends is to be afforded dialers in a series of four programs from Hollywood within these two weeks, the first, Wednesday night, to feature Irene Dunn and Lionel Barrymore.

At It Again

Once more trouble stalks Ray Knight as he returns to the air in the guise of Billy Bachelor, small town newspaperman and foster papa to twins, over WCAE at 6:45.

Cartoonist To Speak

O. Soglow, creator of the pantomimic cartoon published each Sunday in the Sun-Telegraph comic section, will be interviewed by "Aircaster" over WCAE at 6:35 tonight.

Made up as "The Little King," whose activities in comic land will replace those of "The Ambassador" in the Sunday funnies beginning September 9, Soglow is at present flying via TWA on a coast-to-coast good will tour.

Soglow arrives here today at 2 p. m. In addition to speaking on the "Aircaster" broadcast, he will make several appearances throughout the city during his visit here.

Local Highlights On WJAS

Bob Hughan's orchestra returns to WJAS tonight for a quarter-hour program at 7.

Other early features—DeFonzo, accordianist, at 6:15, and Gregorio Scalzo's Ensemble at 6:45.

Eddie Peyton promises a waltz medley during his 11:30 Frivolities.

Radio Group to Declare War on Air Abuses

'Cleanup' Committee Undertakes 'Less Futile' Chore

By AIRCASTER

The committee of five orchestra leaders, Richard Himber, Paul Whiteman, Rudy Vallee, Guy Lombardo and Abe Lyman, who started out to represent the radio orchestras in a crusade to cleanse song lyrics, is ready to admit that no such work has developed for it; that radio songs are pretty clean already, and that as long as there is a committee, it might undertake some heavier and much less futile chore.

"So," says Mr. Himber, "we are preparing to throw the force of the organization into a battle with radio stations that abuse recording privileges."

And there, the said Mr. Himber, who is really a sincere sort of fellow, has hit upon a real notion. So at last the committee seems to have a raison d'etre as they say at home, an excuse for being.

WOR is wearied of building up artists and having the networks take them over to make fortunes, while WOR merely takes a low, so it now has an artist bureau. As soon as a promising prospect happens in and proves possessor of talent, WOR now signs him. It's all a preliminary to an ambitious plan, which, perhaps in a month, will make the station the hub of a network, sufficient to cover the country.

Station Doesn't Like Network Snatching Of Embryo Stars

Big drives along this line are under way in Cincinnati, Detroit and several other cities. Incidental to it all, there impends at the Newark station a number of organization changes . . . "Big Time" is the new motto.

The skate cream outfit which formerly employed Shirley Howard and the Jesters has signed for three minstrel shows a week over NBC weds and one at CBS. Starting October 1, there will be a 15-minute set of minstrelry Mondays and Thursdays on NBC red and 30 minutes more on Fridays over the blue net. Pat Kennedy, with Art Kassel's musicians. The new minstrel series swings back Paul Dubov to the air, with Al Bernard.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

This column is being written by PAUL YAWITZ during MR. WINCHELL'S vacation.

The Office-Boy Still at It

You can thank me for digging up another swell news-snippet for you. He's a fellow who knows the mailman of Delaware Bl better than you know your own living room . . . His name is Boris, and he left three items as samples today . . . Penelope Tannenbaum, the daughter of Max, the potato-pancake monarch, definitely will not get married next month. The reason—no one has asked her . . . Pierre Marquies, the Chinese society importer, and his wife, Ciaranelle Kornbloom, the Lay Rider debutante, are calling it off quicker than you can say Jake Rabinowitz. The reason sets in that for 12 years he can't get her to eat borscht with chop-sticks." And here's the last one he left: "Elvira Lapidus, daughter of Simon Lapidus, winner of the salami-eating contest, and Van Alsten Goldstein, the Heater St. delicatessen king, will be hitched next month. The marriage was made financially possible because the sandwiches for the contest were supplied by the groom" . . . All Boris asks in return for these scoops is that you give a mention to Moscowitz's 2nd Ave. Hawaiians . . . You can always get in touch with him at the Ritz—where he says he is the press-agent—he presses pants, coats, dresses.

By the way, I had two of the desks taken out of the office and a lot of chairs brought in their place . . . I have an idea I can sell seats to outsiders who want to come in and watch you while you write a column . . . It will be a little extra money for me, and it will give you a little rehearsal before your stage debut. . . . I also had the head-rest taken off your typewriter—I never thought that it was dignified, anyway . . . Arthur L. Limpman dropped in . . . He says he wrote the lyrics for "She'll Be Coming Down the Mountain," and that Manning Sherwin only wrote the music . . . I knew you'd be glad to correct any false impression in your story . . . The proceeds of the dinner to I. J. Fox by the allied fur industries at the Waldorf Sept. 29 will be given to charity . . . Ted Lewis goes into Vivian Johnson's in NJ—It's the spot where Barney Gallant is hosting in dialect . . . Peggy Wood, the pretty-pretty in "Saluta," is an x-mortician from Winston-Salem, N. Car.

Did you ever see a courtroom scene in the flickers where the judge didn't have a gavel? Well, there are two lawyers who told me they haven't seen a magistrate use a gavel in almost a quarter-century . . . That line you wrote about Noel Meadow's effort to get a backer for his play by sending a girl on the street with a sandwich sign also got results . . . The gal, Eugenie Kaye, received 12 proposals for Orange Blossoms and Noel got an angel . . . Why not refer to two Hollywood lovers who are quarreling as "Hollywounding each other?" . . . What good is that Emerson of yours—I got Spain on it, but couldn't understand a word . . . Think I will take the afternoon off and perfect a low-wave set that translates the foreign languages for you . . . Bernard Morris, a salesman, came in to sell you a liquor tester today—one that turns red when the liquor is good and green when it's bad . . . I told him you were color-blind, and asked if he had something with a gong on it.

Your right-hand man,
The Office-Boy.

P. S.—Wm. Mass Wright, who recently Mexploded with Cobina, was hitched in Bar Harbor, Me., to Myrtle Gardner the lass named as co-respondent in Cobina's counter-suit.

Burlesque Sept. 2

When the Variety, redecorated, reopens September 2 with a Sunday midnight show, it also will have a new lighting system and other improvements. The bar grill and the foyer have also been embellished.

"Red Hot," in two acts and 44 scenes, will open the fall season. Heading a cast of 40 people, including a beauty chorus of 20, will be Maxine Deshon, the "Georgia Songbird," who has never appeared in Pittsburgh. She recently closed a run of five months on Broadway. Miss Deshon is a singer and dancer. Co-starring will be Ann Juliet, dancer; Gladys McCormick and Gladys Clark, singers and dancers, also will make their local debut.

Al Golden, ace Broadway producer of musical productions and former musical comedy star, has been engaged by George Jaffe, manager and proprietor of the Variety, to supervise and direct all shows. Mr. Golden will also appear on the stage from time to time.

As special attractions, Mr. Jaffe has engaged Miss Dorothy Wahl and "Diana." Miss Wahl will present, for the first time here, her original "Dance of the Plumes." She comes direct from the Belgian City at the World's Fair.

Harry Steppe, last seen here six years ago, will top the funmakers, supported by Joe DeRita and Happy Hyatt, smallest and heaviest comedians in burlesque. Other principals are Herman Ferber, Abe Sher, Jack Richards, Inez Marvin and Crater and Pearl, dance team.

HOT FROM HOLLYWOOD

By JIMMY STARR

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 27.—Hello! Frantic notes from a movie village reporter's cuff . . . So Mary and Doug met and "talked over things." It's all such a big secret. Doug looks younger than ever! . . . The Adolphe Menjou-Verree Teasdale wedding plans for a ceremony in Santa Barbara went smash when they learned they must be married in Los Angeles County — so a justice of peace will pronounce the important words.

Miss Pickford

There's a very funny side to the Al Rogell-Ena Gregory-Van Smith tangle which may never reach anxious ears. It was one of those rare moments. The producer, having viewed the finished flicker, rushed from the projection room and said: "This picture is absolutely different! Nobody acts!"

The Ross Shattucks (Maggie Ettinger) tossed off a cocktail soiree Wednesday afternoon for the newlyweds, the Bill Seiters (Marion Nixon), the about-to-beweds, Lorena Layson and Danny Danker, and for Adele Whitely Fletcher, a fan magazine scribbler . . . Frank Morgan and Genevieve Tobin have argued so much over the championship qualities of their dogs, they now have wagered a plane trip to New York to the one whose pooches win at the big canine show . . . Darryl Zanuck's back from cracking away at big game in Africa—and already there's a busy buzz of activity on the Twentieth Century lot.

Hallam Cooley, ex-actor who has been climbing steadily in cinematic circles as a high-powered agent, put over a nifty on the local snoopee-sleuths. He got his divorce under his real name, Burrs.

That reported burglar's visit to a certain star's home the other night was not just an ordinary sneak of a guy seeking valuables. It was a definite attempt to secure certain papers that will be introduced in a rather sensational divorce case!

Jeanne Havens Monteagle caused a bit of stir in movie and social circles when she eloped with Johnny Maschio, but mama put a quick end via the annulment route to that marriage.

Now it's Jeanne's pretty sister, Patricia, who is deserting the San Francisco smart set for the movies. "Discovered" by Eph Asher, Universal executive, and then urged by Associate Producer William Anthony McGuire to try the films, Miss Monteagle is slated to make her cinema debut in "The Great Ziegfeld."

Art Franklin squeaks one about the film reviewer who was hurt in an auto accident—and even his injuries were critical!

Carl Laemmle, Jr., has a real mystery up his sleeve. Even the cast for "The Mystery of Edwin Drood" will not be permitted to know the murderer. The climax of the thriller is being kept in a Universal studio safe. Only the actor, the director, the writer and the boss will know the finish until the preview.

All of Phil Baker is being whacked out of Universal's "Gift of Gab," which, no doubt, will cause him to start his movie career over again—and receive a couple of ribs from Jack Benny.

A salute to Harriet Parsons (mama Louella's absolutely beaming!) for starting out with the antiqued "screen snapshot" idea and working it up to an extremely interesting and first class short subject. As a reward for many months of tireless pioneering, Harriet now has a new contract.

Al Jolson, Ruby Keeler and Paul Whiteman have a deal in the frying pan ('cause it's so near the fire) to barnstorm the country with a series of one-night stands as soon as their present engagements are at an end.

Miriam Hopkins is steamboating it back to New York for a spell. And Samuel Ornitz, the play feller, is headed in the same direction to put on a couple of footlight ditties . . . You probably don't care at all, but Maureen O'Sullivan's film fans are always sending her four-leafed clovers. She has several thousand of them stored away . . . Pat O'Brien, an old-time actor and director (not related to the present Warner star), is now trying to stage a comeback with an independent outfit, and is figuring on using his real name, which will probably result in the same confusion that confronted William Boyd, of the stage, and William Boyd, of the movies.

Miss Hopkins

For the first time in his screen career, Chaplin will start his picture (date still uncertain) with no less than 75 down-on-paper routines. It has been his custom to begin with five gag sequences and make up the others as he goes along.

Plays and Players

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

According to Edward B. Lee architect, who designed and supervised remodeling of the new Harris Alvin, it is to be the first theater of its size to depend entirely upon color and lighting for decorative effect. No plaster casts, figures or cornices have been used in the Alvin, Mr. Lee relying entirely upon colors, modernistically applied, advanced style murals and an especially designed system of indirect color lighting for effects and decorations. The Alvin, after months of construction, is to be opened to the public Friday.

George Shafer, owner of the Pitt, has selected Jack James to be the new manager of the house, which will reopen Friday with eight acts of vaudeville and a feature picture, "Born To Be Bad," co-starring Loretta Young and Cary Grant. Performances will be continuous from 10:30 a. m. Arthur Fisher, New York booker, will line up the stage shows for the Pitt, which is now being brushed up for the opening. The lobby is being entirely repainted.

"No More Ladies," comedy by A. E. Thomas that was a hit in New York last season, will have several members of the original cast when it comes to the Nixon some time in October as one of the subscription offerings of the American Theater Society. The company will include Walter Pidgeon, Daphne Warren Wilson, Robert Lowes, Betty Linley, Nicholas Joy, Roy Gordon, Ann Dere, Isabel Delehanty and the following players of the Broadway cast: Mary Sargent, Bradley Cass, Marcella Swanson, Boyd Davis and John Bramall. The author of the play recently sailed for England to supervise the London production of the comedy with an all-English cast headed by Ellis Jeffreys, Arthur Margetson and Lawrence Grossmith.

Producer Selects Ideal Locale

Guided by a personal knowledge of Prince Edward Island, the actual locale of the story, Producer Kenneth Macgowan has selected Santa Cruz, California, as the ideal location site at which to film exteriors of "Anne of Green Gables." The country there is said to resemble to a striking degree that about which L. M. Montgomery wrote in her beloved novel of childhood and youthful romance. The company, headed by Director George Nicholls, Jr., Anne Shirley and Tom Brown, who have been selected to play the two leading roles, will be on location in the Santa Cruz district several weeks. O. P. Heggie has just been added to the cast.

Producer Macgowan's father and mother were married on Prince Edward Island, and his father was born there. His mother's father was American consul there for many years.

Movie Deals With Stratosphere

Trem Carr has signed June Collyer for the lead opposite William Cagney in "Murder in the Stratosphere." Eddie Nugent, who recently appeared in "A Girl of the Limberlost," will also play an important role in "Murder in the Stratosphere," an original story by Tristram Tupper, based on the recent stratosphere flight. The picture will include scenes filmed by a special camera crew at the actual take-off of the flight.

One Scene $200,000

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 27.—Impossible to resist the enthusiasm of Samuel Goldwyn over his ice cream factory sequence. That will top off Eddie Cantor's "Kid Millions." Carrying you around on a personally conducted tour, the producer, who is the hero of an ice plant, Hollywood anecdotes, experts points out the ingenuity of his set. Lines up his theatres, orders sound tracks played, runs off a rehearsal of a number and betrays in a hundred ways that the fantasy is his pet sequence in the film.

Heaven knows the man is no piker, for he is spending $200,000 on this episode that will run only seven minutes on the screen.

SEQUENCE IN COLOR

Nothing would do, of course, but to shoot the sequence in color. This, the producer contends, is the only medium for fantasy. Next year he'll gamble better than a million to shoot his entire production of "The Wizard of Oz" in color.

An amusing thing came up about the ice cream factory sequence. Sam has been crazy about ice cream ever since he was a boy. He displays an almost child-like delight in pointing out the 10-foot imitation ice cream sodas on the set. But he can't eat the sweet. It disagrees with him.

REWARD AWAITS CHILD

If a certain little girl who asked Mack Gordon for an autograph will come forward, the rotund song writer will present her with a check. She was an angel-faced youngster with long curls. She stopped Gordon the other night as he was entering the Cocoanut Grove. He smiled at her and wrote in her book:

"Stay as sweet as you are."

A few feet further on, he stopped with a sudden exclamation, then turned around and hurried back to his car.

These few words in the youngster's autograph book will be celebrated in a song. They're the title of one of the Gordon and Revel numbers in "College Rhythm." And Mack wants to find the youngster and show his appreciation.

In Which the Customers Do the Work

"I THOUGHT you might enjoy the following anecdote," writes Arthur Murray, "although I dare say it has been printed before. (Editor's note—You'd better dare say!) At any rate it concerns J. P. Morgan, the elder, during one of his visits to England.

"Seems that a lottery salesman persistently annoyed Morgan by trying to sell him a chance in a huge lottery. The price of the chance amounted to something like $2.50 in our money. And no matter where Morgan went, the salesman was right on the job.

"'Good morning, Mr. Morgan,' he would smile. 'I'm here once more to see if you have changed your mind. But a ticket please.'

"Whereupon the older Morgan would grow excited.

"'But I am a busy man—and a rich one,' he would thunder. 'Why do you annoy me with such trivial matters?'

"The response would be very soft.

"'Trivial to you—but it means a lot to me, Mr. Morgan. Since the money means nothing to you, why not take a chance? Just one ticket, please.'

"In the end, weary of the man's persistence, Morgan bought a ticket in order to get rid of him. And several weeks later, exactly as you might have expected, Morgan won the grand prize. The salesman rushed over with the great news.

"'Mr. Morgan,' he cried excitedly, 'did you hear about your luck? You have won $200,000!'

"The multi-millionaire, amused at the salesman's outburst, smiled jovially at him.

"'I think,' he said, 'that since I've been so fortunate, I'll share some of my luck with you. Which would you prefer—$20,000 in cash, or $5,000 a year for the rest of your life?'

"The salesman didn't hesitate.

"'Better give me the $20,000 in cash,' he replied earnestly. 'With your luck, I wouldn't live another six months!'"

"LOOKS as though I started something," says Marlowe Wilson, "with my first modernized nursery rhyme. Here's another for your collection:

"'Jack and Jill went up a hill
"'To fetch a pail of water;
"'Jack fell down, and broke his crown,
"'So now he's suing for damages!'"

"THE other day," writes Howard Snyder, "I encountered—of all things—a drunk on horseback. The stew was galloping his mount at a great rate, and the saddle was slowly slipping to one side.

"The horse suddenly stumbled, and, much to the drunk's amazement, one of the nag's hind legs caught in the stirrup. The stew looked at the horse.

FRANCE JAILS U. S. ACTRESS

BREST, France, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Ruth Putnam Mason, New York actress and producer, had her second look at the inside of a French jail yesterday after police arrested her for an alleged violation of a two-year-old expulsion order.

In May, 1932, Miss Mason was arrested on a charge of issuing checks without sufficient funds while attempting to produce one of her plays in Paris. Police said sentence was suspended at that time and she was ordered to leave France.

Miss Mason came to Le Havre from England August 16 to visit friends along the Britanny Coast. When taken into custody at her hotel today, she protested arrest on the grounds that money she had obtained through the check had been reimbursed. She also told police she had lost $75, but that she had two dollars left.

N. Y. BANDIT GUN YIELDS CLUE

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Discovery of a second serial number on the machine gun discarded by bandits who stole $427,000 from an armored truck in Brooklyn last week has enabled police to trace it to a dealer in Wisconsin.

Authorities were close-mouthed about this latest clue, possibly indicating they attached greater importance to it than to a scuttled speedboat raised from Jamaica Bay Saturday or to a Federal Reserve money bag found in Elizabeth, N. J.

Headquarters would not divulge the gun dealer's name, or even the Wisconsin city in question.

Meanwhile word of the $52,000 in rewards posted by the United States Trucking Corporation for recovery of the loot and capture of the bandits spread through the underworld. Police hoped for much from this bait.

LILYAN TASHMAN PORTRAIT HOSTESS AT PARTY

Hollywood Stars at Affair

Universal Service.

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 27.—Hollywood, known the world over for unusual entertainments, recently witnessed one of the most amazing parties in all its bizarre history.

It saw Lilyan Tashman, dazzling screen star who died tragically five months ago, "preside" at a social gathering which she herself had planned, and to which she had invited guests.

And a portrait of Lilyan, internationally famous before her death as "the best dressed woman in the movies," officiated as "hostess."

Before her departure for the East last spring, a trip which ended with her unexpected death in a New York hospital March 21, Miss Tashman had made elaborate preparations to entertain Mrs. Kate Murphy and Mrs. Mary Rennie, of San Jose aunts of her husband, Edmund Lowe, noted screen actor.

MRS. KATE MURPHY — EDMUND LOWE — MRS. MARY RENNIE

Lowe and Miss Tashman, who had celebrated their tenth wedding anniversary, often had been acclaimed as the "happiest married couple in Hollywood."

Their love which started when Lilyan was one of the "Ziegfeld Follies" girls in a show with Nita Naldi, had lasted through the years. There never was an inkling of professional jealousy.

Edmund rejoiced when Lilyan had a good role, and Lilyan to the day of her death was one of her husband's most devoted fans and admirers.

So, recently, Edmund Lowe arranged to carry out plans for the party which Lilyan had arranged. He made preparations for bringing his two aunts to the beach home at Malibu Beach where he and Lilyan had spent so many pleasant years together.

He sent out invitations to those whom Lilyan had planned to invite.

And everything went as Lilyan had planned.

Edmund Lowe Gives Treat Wife Planned Before Her Death

There came Lionel Barrymore, Ben Lyon, Violet McLaglen, Myrna Loy, Virginia Bruce, Peter Ostrum, and a score more whose names are known wherever films flicker. In all, 40 noted personages welcomed Mrs. Murphy and Mrs. Rennie to Hollywood.

And in the living room, where they had assembled, they found not all pictures and all photographs had been removed—except one large picture of Miss Tashman.

NATIONAL GUN LAW URGED

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—United States Senator Robert F. Wagner was requested today to lead the fight for a national law governing firearms and other dangerous weapons.

Wagner's leadership was asked in a telegram sent by Bennett B. Ingraham, attorney and one of the organizers of the American Safety League.

The league started a similar drive in 1930, but little was accomplished then, Ingraham said. The new campaign will be carried on vigorously, he declared.

According to Ingraham, there are almost as many firearms laws as there are states, which causes confusion and makes it easy for criminals to obtain weapons. He said:

"The Hearst newspapers are to be highly commended for the support they are giving toward the enactment of a national law."

STATES STUDY LOTTERY FOR RELIEF

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Agitation forming employment of the once outlawed lottery to bolster depression depleted state and some municipal treasuries has bobbed up in several parts of the country.

Profits from the proposed lotteries, banned as illegal on the grounds they drained dry the pockets of the poor who were attracted by the glittering, lucrative prizes, mainly would be used for unemployment relief, a survey today showed.

In New York a series of lotteries designed to raise $12,000,000 net annually has been suggested by Mayor La Guardia's committee on taxes for financing unemployment relief.

DIRECTORS BY LOT

Under the plan buyers of tickets would become stockholders in special corporations whose officers would be selected by lot. A fourth to a third of the total revenue would be used to pay these officers' salaries. Their duties practically would be nil. The Mayor is not pressing the lottery idea at present, and is understood to take the position he desires to give the proposal more study.

A bill for a statewide lottery has been prepared for consideration at the next session of the Maryland Legislature by Lester Muller, president of the Baltimore City Council, with the objective to raise relief funds in the event of government curtailment. A similar bill by Muller was defeated last year.

A few Oregon newspapers lightly urged a state lottery for unemployment relief.

Proponents of a lottery also have been active in Louisiana, where the most notorious of American lotteries once flourished.

KILLED IN MAINE

In Maine a bill to establish a state lottery was killed in the last legislative session. A like bill was introduced in the Ohio Legislature, but was not acted upon. The Ohio measure called for a state managed sweepstakes, the proceeds to be used in financing state institutions.

Measures other than lotteries involving the fragile element of chance are to be introduced in several state legislatures.

Pari mutuels, giving $400,000 or more annually and used to retire emergency bonds, are regarded as almost certain to be re-enacted in the coming winter session of the New Hampshire Legislature as a finance raising measure.

DES MOINES, Ia., Aug. 25.—(AP.)—The mice have given the boys a few more on life.

But when Drake went to get them, mice had eaten away their labels, confusing identities.

CITY RANKS LOW IN MILK USE

The first report on returns from a survey made here shows that Pittsburgh ranks low in milk consumption, according to Dr. Fred C. Howe, consumers' counsel for the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

The survey is a part of the nation-wide check on the consumption of milk by school children.

The report deals with milk purchases by 499 families in Pittsburgh. Measured in terms of food value, the average purchases by the 499 families, including both fresh milk and evaporated milk, are found to be very low, according to experts. The average purchase was less than a half pint a day.

PANTSLESS MYSTERY MAN DIES, MOTORIST HELD

NEW YORK Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Dizzy: Out to see a Wetman Adams dry farms and to a Greek cafe Tom Millard told me about his 9 volcano summer. Home and a letter from the hard-fist comics, Mitchell and Dunard. Also a note from William Leon Phelps and a Vancouver fishing card from Gutsy Ford.

Typed a spell and off charter-nering with my wife to Far Rockaway, the first time there in a dozen years. And along the way a jerry-built roadside booth advertised the former Follies girl, Imogene Wilson, as an entertainer. So tossing dimes in the sea for the Boston to retrieve.

To the city to dine and talked to Gary Cooper of the movies, and he sadly. Also saw Mrs. W. R. Hearst, Mrs. Margaret Emery and Frances Langford of the radio. Early to bed reading a gripping first novel, "Slim," about journeyman lineman, so exciting I did not put it down until 4 a. m.

Because I was pupped in the shadows of the ten-twent-thirt, and revival of their blood and thunder draws me down front on the aisle. After witnessing "Hawkshaw, the Detective," recently, I fell to wondering why there has been no rediscovering of "Bertha, the Beautiful Cloak Model"—or was it "Nellie?" I never remember which was the cloak model and which the sewing machine girl, and Owen Davis does not list those classics in his otherwise revealing paragraph in Who's Who.

Street begging in New York for the able-bodied moocher has touched an all-time low. Mendicants are facing rebuffs as stifling as a general strike. Charity organization propaganda that promiscuous alms giving defeats their endeavors is largely responsible for growing indifference. The panhandler who used to pick up $10 and $15 a day finds it difficult now to garner cigaret change.

Sport togs that offer little variety save in color have completely rubbed out the summer dandy, a distinct tizzy type that shimmered with the heat waves. On Broadway it used to be the actor, enjoying the seasonal lay-off and in full pocket. Kyrle

Bellew, for instance, was the first to promenade in all white duck, red tie and ice cream sneakers. Raymond Hitchcock sported the first Panama with gaudy band, turned down in the back. George M. Cohan standardized the bamboo cane and the Roger brothers gave a sartorial perk with wide black silk girdles instead of the customary suspenders. And is any wearing apparel so hideous as suspenders?

Birth of slang note—"Chicken feed" as a term for small change was popularized, if not coined, by Barnum, the showman.

Writing rooms of big department stores have a daily quota of genteel and almost poverty stricken widows flung at Fate. They are mostly those who have an income so slim they can only occupy a high up hall-bedroom and subsist on a furtively cooked tin fare. The writing rooms give the Old Lady 31's opportunity to watch other people and remember things about the other half of life without a feeling of intrusion.

Circus clowns have become dregs on the amusement market. The generation of youngsters, who, in the old days thrilled to splotch-faced mimes today finds them tedious. The clown in their bounding opulence were paid top salary of $40 a week and keep. The average was $30. Marceline, Slivers and Butch never made more than $75. Today there are more clowns than jobs at $15 a week. A clown boarding house on 10th avenue is now vacant. It once had 50 patrons.

Sir Ernest Shackleton always liked to talk to cab drivers . . . John Ringling's financial losses in the past four years topped 100 millions . . . Duse was poisoned by anything tasting of egg . . . Midgets are the most incurable of cross-word puzzle addicts . . . Noel Coward was facinated by big bridges . . . Lady Nancy Astor has not missed weekly church services in 21 years . . . ROW OVER BOYS IN BIKE THEFTS

Police Inspector Jerry Deasy clashed today with Magistrate J. W. McGowan over the disposition of a case involving seven boys arrested in an investigation of the theft of approximately 125 bicycles.

After he heard that McGowan had discharged the boys with a reprimand, Deasy declared:

"They can't get away with anything like that."

He announced he would file informations against the youths before an alderman if reports of the discharge were verified.

Police declared that approximately 50 bicycles alleged to have been stolen in the East End and Squirrel Hill districts had been recovered.

At the hearing in Morals Court, two of the boys admitted stealing bicycles. They were Henry Lawrence, 16, of 36 Orphan street, and Joseph Yallun, 16, of 47 Orphan street.

The other five youths maintained they had bought bicycles and parts from other boys. The five were Albert Bucser, 18, of 831 Chianti street; Joseph Pettropola, 17, of 609 Lenora street; Cesidio Daquila, 17, of 169 Meadow street; Andrew Spanola, 17, of 525 Lenora street, and John Capuano, 16, of 553 Lenora street.

Covers will be accepted from individual subscribers only and should be addressed legibly with ample space left for the placing of the stamps.

Compliance cannot be made with unusual requests such as the affixing of plate number blocks. Requests for uncanceled stamps should not be included with orders for first-day covers.

Next Friday the stamp will be placed on sale at Washington, with a first-day service being provided along the same lines as that from Chicago. General sale throughout the country will begin September 1.

2 ROB AUTOIST AT STOP LIGHT

Stopping his automobile for a traffic light at Lincoln and Shetland avenues early yesterday, Harry Line, 1245 Lincoln avenue, was attacked by two men who fled with his car and $5, leaving their victim unconscious in the street, police reported.

Line said he was struck on the head.

Walking in Beacon street near Schenley Park, Samuel Mallinger, of 5737 Phillips avenue, was held up by two men and a girl. They drove away after taking $2.50 from their victim, he reported.

James Poole, of Dickson street, was held for investigation at a hearing before Magistrate Anthony Lucas in Central Police Court yesterday. He was arrested by state police at Butler Saturday and turned over to city detectives. The latter said an attendant of a gasoline station at Negley and Center avenues identified him through his pictures as the man who held him up August 3.

Thieves broke into the Martin Noone Cafe at 107 Ninth street and stole six cases of beer and one case of whisky.

PICNICKER DIES IN FALL OFF TRUCK

Milk Driver Thrown From Truck; Score Hurt in Crashes

One man was killed and a score of persons injured in automobile accidents in this district over the week-end.

Joseph Houston, 31, of 3013 Clermont avenue, Brentwood, was fatally injured when he fell from a truck on Willet road in Baldwin Township, while returning from a picnic last night.

Witnesses said he was knocked from the end-gate of the truck as it passed over a rough section of the road. Suffering a crushed chest, he was dead on arrival at South Side Hospital. William Cutteryahn, of Perry street, Brentwood, driver of the truck, was ordered to post bond for a coroner's hearing.

MILK MAN THROWN

Stanley Ryder, 30, of 134 Second street, Aspinwall, dairy company driver, was taken to West Penn Hospital with a fractured skull early yesterday. He had been thrown from his truck in a collision with an auto driven by George Williams, 31, of 2140 Wightman street, at Liberty avenue and Thirty-eighth street.

Lawrenceville police said Williams was pronounced under the influence of liquor following an examination by City Physician Dr. Daniel E. Sable.

FOUR SENT TO HOSPITAL

Four persons were sent to South Side Hospital following a collision involving three cars in Saw Mill Run boulevard, Overbrook.

Those hurt were Charles Oruchow, 33, of 105 Marylea avenue, Brentwood, head injury and possible fracture of his left shoulder; his wife, Helen, 32, driver of one of the cars; Mildred Zoller, 25, of 1909 Larkins way, and Nell Howsare, 26, of Gilihall road, Willock, with whom Miss Zoller was riding.

Edwin Newman, 20, of 2807 Versailles avenue, McKeesport, the third driver, was uninjured, police said.

INJURIES MYSTERY

An auto accident in which at least one man was injured while returning from a picnic in Penn Township last night was being investigated by Constable Samuel Bickerstaff today. Joseph Lawler, of 5828 Alder street, was taken to Pittsburgh Hospital for minor injuries.

He was returning in an auto with several other persons from a picnic held by the eighth Ward Democratic Club, Baum boulevard, at Zimmer's Grove. Lawler, Bickerstaff said, did not know how he received his injuries.

POLICEMAN RUN DOWN

A Millvale policeman was seriously injured when struck by a hit-and-run driver he attempted to halt for speeding at North avenue and Klopfer street.

The officer, Walter Riley, was taken to Allegheny General Hospital with a deep laceration on the face, a broken nose and ankle. More than 20 stitches were required to close his wounds.

Later, Millvale police arrested Willard Keil, R. D. No. 1, Allison Park, as the driver of the auto. Keil denied striking Riley and said his car had been stolen.

BOY RUNS INTO AUTO

Philip Polumbo, 3, of 7211 Frankstown avenue, sustained a head injury when he ran into the side of an auto near his home.

Three persons were injured in a collision between two autos in McKeesport yesterday. Mrs. Dorothy Pickup, wife of Chester Pickup, aviator and driver of one of the cars; their daughter, Bebe, 4, and Mrs. Genevieve Crouch, wife of James C. Crouch, 727 Wisteria avenue, Mt. Lebanon, the other driver, were treated in McKeesport Hospital.

'BARON' TAKES SHOW HONORS

"Baron Wilhelm von Braun" now can eat from a silver platter.

The "Baron" is a Great Dane, not yet two years old, but he walked away with all the honors at the dog show of the Western Maryland Kennel Club at Cumberland last Saturday.

The "Baron," owned by James H. Brown, of 206 Pennsylvania boulevard, Mt. Lebanon, won six ribbons and a silver plate, emblematic of the best dog of the breed.

He won a blue ribbon as the best of all winners in his class, and was runner-up in the variety class, in which all winners in all breeds competed.

It was only the second time the "Baron" had competed. The first time, when only 11 months old, he won the reserve championship at the Sewickley Dog Show.

Dr. A. S. Haines exhibited the prize winner.

TRAFFIC CLUB GOLF OUTING

The Traffic Club of Pittsburgh will hold their fall golf outing Wednesday at the Pittsburgh Field Club. Prominent railroad and industrial executives will participate. Mr. Warrer W. Brown is chairman of the entertainment committee.

The Traffic Club of Pittsburgh is composed of railroad, steamship and industrial officials, and was the first traffic club organized in the United States. Robert Main, district freight agent of the Canadian Pacific Railroad, is president, and A. J. Bevin, general traffic manager of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company, is chairman of the board of governors.

Onion Workers Cry Even When They Are Happy

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

The strike of the onion workers in Ohio will take some settling. That's because an onion worker cries even when he is happy.

Some onion worker tossed an onion at the mayor's house and it exploded. It's a horrible improvement on chemical warfare.

If we cannot get any more onions then the hamburger must bloom without its rose and the chicken pot-pie must survive without artifical stimulant.

If the strike spreads to leeks and scallions it will change atmospheric conditions in America. Progress, conversation and history will stop because nobody will know what the neighboras are having for dinner.

However, it will make necking much better. If a girl has to get pink toothbrush we want her to get them from eating strawberries.

COUNTY LEADS RELIEF WORK

James L. Stuart, director of the work division for Allegheny County, State Emergency Relief Board, in his report shows this county to lead all others in the state's work program.

The report states that Allegheny County provided 9,747,020 hours of employment and expended $5,474,926 of federal funds and $1,995,862 contributed by the various communities sharing in the work.

The largest single project, according to Stuart, was the Cathedral of Learning, providing 350,000 man hours of work.

More than a third of federal funds were expended for road and street improvement.

POLICE BELIEVE VICTIM KICKED FROM CAR

Driver Traced by Dent In Radiator; Brick Thrown by Witness

Morgue officials today were seeking the identity of a man, about 30, who fell or was thrown from an automobile on the North Side early yesterday and suffered fatal injuries.

The victim's nationality was equally puzzling to morgue authorities and homicide detectives who investigated the case. He was believed to be a Mexican or a Filipino.

Under arrest in connection with his death was William Moody, 30, Negro, of 139 East Jefferson street, North Side. He was captured in his home several hours after the man had been found on the street in the 700 block of Sheridan avenue.

Account of kicking him from his auto, Moody told Detectives Edward Scanlon and Frank Crowley he had picked the man up on Wylie avenue and the latter said he wanted to go to Page street on the North Side. He had no trousers or coat.

Moody, according to the detectives, said the man fell from his auto and that he had driven away when three men approached the car. North Side police arresting Moody later, charged he drew a knife on several officers. He was subdued and treated at Allegheny General Hospital for a scalp injury.

Moody was traced, police said, by a dent in the radiator of his auto and his car license. One of the witnesses to the affair reported he had picked up a brick when Moody drove away and tossed it at the auto, hitting the radiator.

The victim died in Allegheny General Hospital several hours later after 34 stitches had been placed in his head.

AUTO INJURIES FATAL TO GIRL

GREENSBURG, Pa., Aug. 27.—Sixteen-year-old Catherine Onderko, of Latrobe, died in Westmoreland Memorial Hospital here yesterday of injuries received when she was struck by an automobile as she was walking home from a dance late Saturday night.

The automobile swerved from the road and crashed into an embankment, injuring two of its occupants.

George M. Friberg, of 1714 Willow street, McKeesport, driver of the car, was instructed to appear for an inquest later.

Herbert Eckles, 25, of 2721 Grover avenue, McKeesport, and Miss Margaret Thomas, 31, of 309 Ninth avenue, McKeesport, riding with Friberg, sustained minor injuries.

CHUM SHOOTS BOY IN PLAY

Three days after he was shot in the shoulder while playing "gangsters" with a companion, Stanley Lapinski, 16, of 146 Second avenue, Homestead, walked into Homestead Hospital yesterday for treatment.

He was ordered to return today when two slugs will be removed.

Lapinski told hospital authorities he was shot at a camp near Culmerville on Thursday when two bullets fired by Thomas Brogan, 15, of 216 Amity street, Homestead, glanced off a tree and struck his shoulder. The shooting was accidental, he said.

LIONS, TIGERS BASK IN SUNSHINE IN NEW ZOO QUARTERS

Highland Park's 'Cats' in Open At Last

The "cat" family of seven lions and a tiger, at the Highland Park Zoo, is in better quarters today.

Workmen have connected the inside, dark cages that they have lived in for so long, to steel barred, roofless cages in the open. Not only does this give them additional space, but sunshine and fresh air as well.

Daisy, a lioness, was the first to have a back yard added to her home. She had to be driven out of the inside cage. It was the first time she had been in the sunshine since she came to the zoo.

Nero was suspicious at first, but he finally came out, and finding the solarium to his liking, picked the sunniest spot and went to sleep.

The others took their improved homes in various ways. Jack, whose roar is worse than his bite, according to Lion Keeper Joe Paravate, was belligerent.

The tiger took it as something that had been due him a long time and Cleo and Ruby were calm, as ladies should be.

Deaf Now Taught to Hear Through Finger Tips

A new system of education for the deaf, involving transmission of sound waves through the subject's finger tips, or by the nerves in the back of the neck, is being taught in Pittsburgh by the Sisters of Charity at De Paul Institute, Brookline, it was learned today.

The institute is the second in the world to use the system with success. The other school is the School for the Deaf of the City of Detroit.

The method involves teaching the human skin to distinguish the variable air waves set in motion by speech. Children begin by placing their hand on the cheek of the instructor, with their eyes closed. After learning to read the vibrations created by the instructor's speech, they progress to where they can distinguish words on the palm of the hand or the nape of the neck.

Sister Mary, in charge of the instruction, says it is a slow progress at first, but that within three months of instruction children of 6 are able to "hear" 600 words. The vocabulary of a hearing child at that age is only about 200 words, it is claimed.

A drive for funds to continue the operation of the institution will be ordered by Bishop Hugh C. Boyle in all Catholic churches of the Pittsburgh diocese, September 9.

STATE RIGHTS PERILED, SAYS SCHNADER

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 27.—(AP.)—William A. Schnader, Attorney General and Republican nominee for Governor of Pennsylvania, called upon the states today to "fight for their rights and protect themselves from "federal encroachments of state sovereignty." He said:

"The time has come when the states must fight for their rights."

Schnader was addressing the National Association of Attorneys General, of which he is president. He added:

"If they acquiesce in the increasing encroachments of the federal government upon state sovereignty, it will not be long until there will be no state rights remaining for which to fight; and perhaps no states."

In his prepared address Schnader said indirectly that a Supreme Court ruling holding a state liquor monopoly a non-governmental function and subject to federal taxation opened the way for the states to place a similar interpretation upon "the securities of some of the federal agencies" and tax them.

Schnader said the Constitution limited the authority of the federal government in domestic affairs to "matters of national concern" but listed education, labor, health, agriculture and production as "undesirably state fields" over which control has been extended from Washington.

He said there is scarcely a single field of taxation which has not been invaded by the federal government, adding that both rely substantially on the same types of taxes for their revenue. He asserted 79 separate federal taxes are now in force, exclusive of processing and equalization taxes under the recovery program.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

BUSINESS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—If anyone asks you how business has been during the last 60 days, don't tell him.

Mr. Mallon

Just say that a difficult summer has been made much more difficult by the unforeseen drought and strikes and that a September improvement is now at hand. The extent of the improvement is impossible to estimate accurately, and much depends on how much money the government is going to spend.

The balanced monthly business chart shows the existing situation very clearly. Industrial production fell off 7 points more than seasonal in July and is off probably 2 points more in August. Employment declined only half as much as production, but wages felt almost the full measure of the blow.

The manufacturers are apparently spreading the smaller amount of work on a part-time basis to ease the effect of the decline on employment. But there is also evidence of a little wage cutting on the side, although you canont say exactly where.

Our mid-summer decline, therefore, appears to be about 12 to 14 per cent more than seasonal. All lines, except production, are generally at the level of this time last year (before the NRA became effective).

BACKGROUND

Wheat knocked down the industrial production figure most was steel. It has been operating at about 24 per cent of capacity lately. That is because it did most of its mid-summer business before July 1, when increased prices went into effect.

Textiles also lagged under a 25 per cent curtailment agreement which expired August 25. The inside word is that stocks of finished cotton goods still are unusually high and that the textile manufacturers do not care particularly whether the threatened strike comes off September 1 or not.

Lumber has been just so-so, but automobiles are holding up remarkably well. The automobile line is better off today than any other, except possibly tobacco. The automobile price cuts certainly stopped the buyers' strike in that industry. The maneuver was so successful that most insiders believe the manufacturers will lop a few more gadgets off their cars next year and maintain existing low prices, if they do not lower them further.

PRICES

The increase of the wholesale price index was entirely due to the drought.

Prices of manufactured goods have actually decreased lately, but the increases in farm and food prices offset this decrease in the general index.

You can get a better slant on that situation by analyzing the weekly figures for the last 10 weeks (the drought period). In that time farm prices have gone up 13½ per cent and food prices rose 9.6 per cent. All other prices went down ½ to 1 per cent.

That shows that the farmer will be able to make what money he has (and get from the government) go further in the purchase of manufactured goods this year, if there is any consolation in that.

HOUSING

The new housing setup has not had a chance to get started. There is some question about when and if it will get started. It has been receiving unusually good publicity, but a private checkup of half a dozen major banks in New York showed that just exactly 31 applications for renovation loans had been made to them up to a few days ago. They have had no chance to look into each one, but they suspect probably half of the applications would be worth looking into.

That is a pointed hint of how much can be expected of the housing program this year.

BUILDING

The figures on building suggest that the PWA flood of billions is again trickling off to an eye-dropper flow.

Building contracts filed in July amounted to about 120 million dollars, of which 31 millions represented direct public works. This shows a horizontal decline from June, when 51 millions of public works contracts were awarded out of a total of 127 millions. That forecasts a sharp contraction of public works activity in the fall, when road building also will decline.

The private building industry has, however, shown some remote signs of life. In July, 56 per cent of the building was financed by private funds. There was a rather striking, but small, spurt in factory building. Nearly 26 millions of the contracts filed were in that class.

The sharp increase was due to new buildings proposed in the chemical and textiles lines and is hardly important enough to signify a trend.

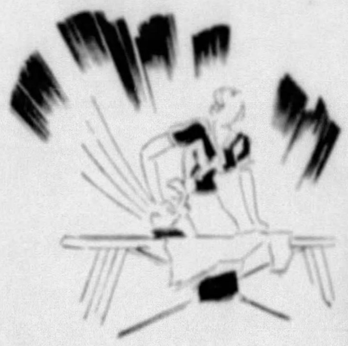
The PUSH was all in HER ARMS....



It costs less than 15¢ for the electricity to operate an electric ironer to do a weekly ironing for a family of 4

...Now ELECTRICITY DOES HER WORK Quicker..Safer..Better

Heavy and cumbersome, the old-fashioned flat iron meant hours of arm-tiring labor... hours of standing. Ironing for even a small family used to consume a whole day—often longer. Electricity has changed all that. Now-a-days electricity has made possible ironing devices so efficient, practical and economical that no woman need wear herself out doing the weekly ironing.

Imagine cutting the time of doing a big ironing for a family of 4 down to less than 3½ hours... or doing a man's shirt in less than 5 minutes. Then too electricity is now so cheap that everyone can afford it... actually it costs less than 15c per week to operate an electric ironer to do that family-of-4 ironing... and an electric iron can be operated for 22 minutes for only 1c.

The length of time the appliances named in this advertisement can be operated is based on 1c per Kwh, in which classification a large percentage of our customers come. If your use of electricity entitles you to the advantages of a 3c rate you can operate the same appliances proportionately longer. However, those who pay 5c for electric energy can operate these appliances only four-fifths of the length of time stated.

SPEAK UP, SISTERS, :-: Glances Into the Realms of Domesticity and Romance :-: By MARION BRUNOT

Snooper Patches Letter, Alice May Lose Job

What a predicament, Alice. You live with and work for your sister, you say, and when the other members of the family were out for an evening you sat down and wrote your heart out to me. But, after reading it, like others have done before you, you tore the epistle into shreds.

You felt sort of better, after your emotion had ebbed, and so you went about the house as usual.

But the next morning your brother-in-law hadn't enough to keep his mind occupied while eating his bacon and egg and so he patched that letter of yours together. And now it looks as if you were to get your walking papers, and as if you'd have to go back to your old place.

Miss Brunot.

You are a handsome girl, you tell me. Your sister has a new baby and you have been the general mother's maid for the last few months. And haven't been paid any fancy price, either. But now the baby isn't so much trouble, and your sister is her old self again, and these, too, are reasons why you may have to move on.

WANTS HOME OF OWN

You are just 16, and very pretty. For you have enclosed your photograph, and you are sweet and all that a young girl should be. And all the while, you long for a home of your own, where love and genuine fellowship abound.

You complain, you can't stand contemplating life as an endless workshop. Don't you know, sister, people who work are the happiest? The idle are the most miserable of the world's creatures. Rest is not quitting this busy career. Rest is but fitting the soul for its sphere, we are told.

After all women are naturally domestic. Being a domestic in someone else's house isn't so bad, if you have a little nook all your own. Also you have a chance to study human nature . . . other natures besides your own, and at close range. I have often wondered what would be the outcome if every girl in home service should write her opinions.

Nothing's so bad as we think, Alice . . . Be pleasant, be neat, read in your spare time, and cultivate nice self-respecting fellows. And you'll have that home of your own some day, and flowers in the garden, and china dishes in the cupboard . . . and love as you would have it . . . Who can say? A home without dissension. For you have seen how miserable one that is like that, can be . . . And good luck to you, sister.

WANTS TO ELOPE

Dear Miss Brunot:

I am a girl of 17, and going with a fellow, 19. He is a nice fellow, but spoiled and used to having his own way. But he has asked me to marry him as many times as there are days in the week. He wants to elope. I have another year of schooling, and so I tell him no. He hints that if I keep saying no, the next time it will be quits.

I'd rather wait until I was out of school and have a nice church wedding, but he wants to get married, and each of us remain living without parents until I am through school.

But I don't want to. I'm not even sure of my love for him. I do care more for him than any other, at first being quite swept off my feet with him. What can I say to him to make him wait?

TELLS OF OTHER GIRL

Also another thing. One night we were out driving and he said: "I'll tell you the truth, I was out with another girl before seeing you this evening.

"I wasn't exactly out with her. But met her down street, and went over to her house before coming to see you."

I didn't say anything, as I do not want him to think I want a hold on him. But Sunday night when he asked me to marry him again, he called me, by mistake, by this girl's name.

The last two times I had a date with him, he appeared with his sleeves rolled up. And a none too fresh shirt. How can I politely speak to him about this? It looked as if I wasn't worth bothering to dress for.

PUZZLED.

He wasn't very polite when he came to see you with dirty linen and rolled up sleeves, so why not tell him frankly about it, and let your own POLITENESS not come into it. Puzzled?

A PROPOSING NATURE

There are men in this world, I am sorry to say, whose women folk have to follow them around considerably to see that they are clean personally. So try and work the wonder before you marry this fellow, sister. It was queer his calling you by the other girl's name. And when he was proposing to you . . . If I were you I'd look into this very carefully, and make sure he is not of a PROPOSING NATURE, and that he may not practice this art elsewhere than with you.

By all means, put off your wedding until you are through school. And under no circumstances live with your people and allow him to live with his, after marriage . . . You say he is SPOILED, anyway . . . This would only ad to this disposition of his . . . Do not elope.

It is the right of every girl who wants a church wedding, to have it. Merely keep on saying so . . . and by and by, it will SOAK IN . . . Don't put too much weight in his having seen this other girl. Since he told you all about it, there must not be anything of importance to it.

Pillbox! It's Worn With the Nose Veil and Boasts an Angelskin Flower.

It's Not Hard to Go 'Grande Dame' in These Chapeaux

By ANNETTE

Pillboxes and pancakes! . . . the fall hats are on parade in full force. And today we are showing two of the season's newest that are going to be seen at the "right" places. Black velvet, of course, leads off for formal wear—whether in tiny little bits that cock themselves forward over the brow, or the large, luxuriously luscious ones that dip, and tilt, and do lovely things to the face and hairline. You'll find it won't be hard to go "grande dame" in hats like the ones shown here . . . The Pillbox in its nose veil and mammoth angelskin flower right on your brow . . . and the original oversize Beret by Lilly Dache.

Annette Can Tell You More

Annette will be glad to tell you more about these hats . . . even where they can be seen in Pittsburgh shops. Call Grant 6500 between 10 a. m. and 4 p. m. and ask for her.

Airedale, Dried Apple Look Easily Erased

Airedales and dried apples! So many of us are guilty of being either or both during the sunny months that anyone who can shed a little light on the subject of what-to-do-and-how-to-do-it should be given a palm to clutch!

That doggy look . . . "doggy" in the sense of being overgrown around the eyebrows . . . is nothing but a good plucking will help. Eyebrows WILL spread during warm sunny days . . . they thrive on it, and keeping after them constantly is the way to be sure of a clean, neat brow-line all the time. Incidentally . . . wisps of brows are OUT—the natural arch is the smartest today.

And don't be an apple . . . a dried one . . . puckered up around the eyes, leathery at the cheekbones, tired at the mouth. These signs are, in most cases, NOT "old age" as we are prone to dismiss it . . . but a natural reaction to too little moisture in the skin and too much drying influence from the outside (notably sun, water, wind!). A visit to the beautician once a week . . . or every other week in the case of a not-too-bad case . . . will work wonders. In fact, it's almost funny the way one's skin soaks up oiling and creaming, much like a plant you've watered after a couple of days of dryness (you've done that, remember?).

Lacking this . . . or if your pennies have all been spent rationing, and getting the way you are . . . try plain, old fashioned, hold-your-nose-and-take-it castor oil! For strange as it may seem, castor oil is a very good homemade treatment for toning up muscles (most muscle oils contain it, we hear) and is usually found in the medicine cabinet. It is very heavy and has a slightly astringent quality which makes it beneficial for under-eye lines . . . crowsfeet . . . and lines about the mouth. In just the same way, olive oil is a good substitute for "custom-made" eye creams. A thin film of this on the lids nourishes and smoothes them out of their crepey tendencies.

Of course, we could go off into a long dissertation about eating . . . and exercise . . . and rest . . . and suchlike—but then, if you're a sensible soul you'll know that anyhow (and if you aren't we can't help it!). After all, if we women keep our skins clean, and fresh . . . reasonably nourished with a good feeding cream and toned up with a light tonic (witch hazel is acceptable if you lack this) we ought to keep a decentish skin in spite of the weather.

Our Children

By ANGELO PATRI

Paying Board

After children grow up and go to work what duty do they owe the family in terms of financial support? Should they contribute to the family funds or should they spend their money on themselves or save it for their own purposes?

Of course this applies to those families that depend upon earnings for support, the great group of families in America. It seems to me that as soon as a young man becomes a wage earner it is his duty, his obligation, to contribute his share, as fully as possible, to the family expenses. These are trying days for all of us, young and old alike. Fathers who have always supported their families well are out of work, their savings are dwindling, ends barely meet. Under the circumstances the children ought to be delighted to be of the least service but we find a few of them who think that they owe nothing to the household, or who think that five dollars a week is a lot to pay for their board.

In one family, where the father has been out of work for a year, the son and daughter, college graduates, are earning good salaries. Each of them contributes five dollars a week for their board and thinks that is plenty. They live at home with all that living there entails. Their meals, washing, their rooms, all for five dollars. They bring home weekend guests and expect mother to provide the meals and wait on the guests as well. All for the five dollars.

"What can I do?" says the mother. "John said when I suggested that he might help more, 'Make Laura give more. If she does I will.' Laura says, 'I think he is a selfish thing. I have expenses that he doesn't have. He ought to do more.'"

"And what do you say?" said I.

"O, I tell them and tell them but it does no good. Father and I don't know which way to turn but if they won't, they won't. If I press the matter they will leave home, maybe. Then what?"

I think I would let them go and allow them to discover what came after that. They would not find a home for five dollars a week. They would get no personal attention. Their weekend guests would cost them full board money. They might wake up to the situation at home and do what they ought to do now, give whatever they can to help their mother and father through this trying time without forcing them to demand it at the point of the law.

It seems to me that there ought to be something more than board money in this relationship between children and parents. When a father and mother have given all they have to rear and educate their children to maturity the children certainly owe something besides board money in return. They owe willing, hearty co-operation. Anything short of that is unworthy a good son and a good daughter.

It is all very well to say that these young people must look out for themselves. They must. But first they must look out for father and mother to whom they owe every good they possess. The debt is not a financial one. It is a spiritual one. It carries with it material obligations that humanity must respect. Selfishness never yet laid the foundation stone of a happy life.

To Remove Mud Stains.

Mud stains can be removed by using a stiff brush when the stains are thoroughly dry. If any attempt is made to brush off moist mud, it is liable to leave a stain. If the spots remain after a brushing, there probably is some oil in them, the removal of which requires use of gasoline or other cleaner. Use these cleaners in a well-aired room or out of doors to prevent combustion.

Keeping Grapes Fresh.

Grapes that are fully grown but not sweet enough to eat should be hung up by the stalk and kept in a warm or sunny place, free from moisture. If the stalk is placed in a little water a bunch of grapes can be kept fresh for some time without showing any signs of drying.

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

Don't mind even if summer is on the way out. For the capes made of flowers will still be smart, although the new models will be of velvet rather than chiffon. A charming cape is of velvet pansies in various shades of purple and blue; from very light blue to a deep violet shade that is almost inky black.

That late vacation will find you the star attraction if you wear one of the new white flannel beach costumes. A nice model has a white flannel beach frock with a front closing of tiny brass buttons. It has a collar edge and side pipings of navy blue braid.

There's plenty to choose from when it comes to the black satin costume, for every shop is showing several models. A charming model is of black satin with a brief bodice of black and white dotted satin in tiny polka dots. The jacket has a double cushion collar of dotted satin.

Very lucky is the young lady who is fortunate enough to wear one of the new taffeta evening frocks. A delightful model has a shirred treatment on the skirt from the hemline down. There is a trimming of tiny magenta velvet bows.

It is inevitable that you will wear a beret for early autumn. A nice model is a squared beret in bright felt with embroidered arrows emphasizing the forward drape over the right eye. There is a soft, high drape in back.

Very welcome is the news that suits of black Lyons velvet are favored by fashionable women. A new suit has a belted jacket with wide notched lapels and is worn with a blouse of pink fish net with a shirred neckline.

Always correct is the simple but perfectly cut and tailored black frock. A new model is of lightweight woolen and has a wide scarf of white silk crepe tucked into a brilliant red leather belt. It is of instep length with a deep squared neckline in front. Perfect for late afternoon wear with a fur cape later.

Household Hints

Rice that has been left over from cooking may be made into fritters. Let a breakfast cup of the unflavored boiled rice cook for a little while in hot vegetable stock, drain and leave on the side of the fire until some of the moisture has evaporated. Fry a minced onion in a little butter and mix with the rice, together with a little salt, pepper, tablespoon of chopped parsley and a well-beaten egg. Form the mixture into small balls and fry to a light brown color.

When you are in a hurry to cream butter for spreading on sandwiches or anything, pour several drops of boiling water into the butter as you beat it with a fork. It will instantly cream. The surplus water will separate itself from the butter and will pour off. This is much better than melting it.

When making net curtains try, if possible to use the width of the net for the length of the window, then you get the selvedge for the hem. You will find when the curtains are washed that the width of the material will not shrink nearly so much as the length.

Whites of eggs can be made into a stiff froth simply and quickly by placing them in a jug and using an ordinary potato masher (perforated type) with an up and down movement, instead of an egg whisk or beater.

Madge Rests as Father Prepares for Quiz

I did not have to wait the fraction of an instant for the response from Junior and Roderick to my verdict as to their unishment for following Hank and Bill to the scene of the attack on Dicky and causing me so much anxiety.

As I told them that I thought I would remit all punishment for this particular offense, and consider it as balanced against one or two other occasions when they had thought, and rightly, that I had punished them unjustly upon Mother Graham's "say-so."

"Oh, Mums!" "Oh, Auntie Madge!" The vociferous young voices sounded simultaneously. "Do you really mean it?"

I assured them that I meant every word I had said, and again their voices rose as one.

"Oh, boy! What a break!"

"Do you know what we were afraid of, Mums?" Junior confided a second or two later, when their exuberance had somewhat spent itself.

"No, dear; what?"

PROMISING DAY

"That the punishment would be having to stay in our rooms today, and not being out where things were doing. Gee! I'll bet this is going to be some day!"

Lillian, coming swiftly in without knocking, an action that I knew meant something important was afoot, grasped an arm of each, kindly, but firmly, and rushed them out of the room.

"If you've had all the breakfast you want," she directed, beat it out into the orchard and play there. But don't go outside the fence. If you do, I won't let you in on the ground floor of all the doings. And don't come back up here. Shoo, now! And don't make any noise."

They scampered downstairs, obeying her injunctions as well as small boys reasonably could, and she turned back to me.

"Get into that bed and cover up," she directed me in a low voice, when she had closed the door.

I wakened, it seemed about 30 seconds later, to the pressure of her hand upon my shoulder.

"If Paddy's pig had anything on you for contrariness!" she said, laughing, when I finally opened my eyes.

"You mean the one that he told to go to Cork in order that the obstinate swine should take the opposite road?" I countered, smiling lazily up at her.

"That's the very animile," she rejoined.

HOW TO PLAY HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

A Close Question

The most difficult thing which can face a player, even in the most advanced stages of skill, is a choice between two sound and well established principles of good play, when a situation arises in which he must violate one principle in order to observe the other. A case is shown below in which a well-known expert found himself forced, on the first trick, to choose between two possible dangerous plays. One would cause him to sacrifice his only card of entry in his best suit, thus blocking it. The other would cause him to risk the loss of a trick, possibly the setting trick, if he failed to use an honor to promote cards in his partner's hand.

South, dealer.
East-West vulnerable.

	♠ A 8 3 2 ♡ 10 ◇ K 5 2 ♣ Q 10 8 7 3
♠ J 6 4 ♡ A J 9 7 ◇ 9 8 7 3 ♣ 5 2	North West East South	♠ K 7 5 ♡ Q 6 5 3 2 ◇ 10 4 ♣ A 9 6
	♠ Q 10 9 ♡ K 8 4 ◇ A Q J 6 ♣ K J 4

South bid a diamond, North two clubs, South two notrump and North three notrump, with East and West always passing. South's rebid at two notrump was based upon his strong support for the club suit, and upon his stoppers in the two unbid suits, which made it appear that there should be at worst a diamond finesse to make the contract.

West opened the heart 7, the fourth best of his strongest suit. Dummy's singleton ten was played and at this point East's problem confronted him. By using the Rule of Eleven he was able to determine that South had exactly two hearts higher than the seven. If these were the only hearts South held, East should surely play the Queen, lest with Ace-Jack, Ace-nine or Ace-eight South be allowed to win two tricks when only deserving of one. There could be no danger of blocking the suit in this case, since West would also hold five hearts.

By carefully considering the cards which must make up South's hand to justify his bidding, East ducked the ten of hearts, being careful to play his six as an encouraging card. The Dummy's ten held the trick and South led clubs until East won with the Ace.

Now East led the heart 3, and South ducked, hoping that West would not continue the suit. But East's echo had made it obvious to West that for some reason East was resorting to extraordinary measures, and it was West's duty to co-operate. After winning this trick with the heart nine West laid down the Ace and South's King dropped. West followed with the Jack, which East overtook with the Queen and cashed the five of hearts for the setting trick.

Crocheted Gloves for Fall

For the girl who is getting ready for college—for the woman who is particular about her accessories—for the woman who is looking for durability—these gloves, that combine beauty and warmth so effectively, are the thing. Just as the dainty crocheted glove was the vogue this summer, so the warmer, sportier one is the thing for cooler weather. In this one the glove is crocheted solid in the easiest of crochet stitches, single crochet. The cuffs are done in stripes—adding a touch of color—and it can be just as quiet or as bright a combination as the wearer's taste dictates. The flaring cuff is very smart in its form and will look smart on the new fall suits and dresses.

Pattern 839 comes to you with complete directions for making the gloves (directions for large, medium and small are given in one pattern); material requirements, and illustrations of the gloves and of all stitches used.

Send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) for this pattern to the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth avenue, New York, N. Y.

Correct Manners

Wedding Announcement

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

As I am going to be married very soon, there are a few questions I wish you would straighten out for me.

1—When are announcements mailed? I am not having a reception; therefore there will be no invitations.

2—How should my announcements read in my case where I have a stepfather?

3—I plan to be married on a Saturday afternoon about four o'clock. What sort of costume should I wear? Is an afternoon dress of chiffon or some such material in good taste, or would you suggest a crepe ensemble or a suit. O.

1—Announcements should be mailed as soon as possible after the ceremony is performed.

2—The best form of marriage announcement for the bride who has a stepfather, is:

Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Otis Wells
Announce the marriage of their daughter Miss Elizabeth Jane Morgan to
Mr. Thomas Worthy
On Tuesday, the first of October
Nineteen hundred and thirty-four
Detroit, Michigan

Usually, when the last name of the bride differs from the last name on the first line, the Miss is used before her name.

3—Any of these costumes is appropriate for an informal afternoon wedding.

COSMOPOLITAN DASH FOUND IN TODAY'S WINNING RECIPES

Veal Rolls Given First Award in Contest

By PRUDENCE PENNY

Well, well, lots of interesting angles to today's prize-winning recipes. There is a sort of international, cosmopolitan dash to the list, what with baked stuffed ham, English style, and Blitz Kuchen, German style, to say nothing of that versatile fowl, chicken, dished up in Spanish style with pepper, ripe olives, onion and nothing!

Today's first-prize winner would be good in any country and at all times. Veal rolls with mushroom sauce. As for French Lucien, you'd better make hay while the sun shines, for fresh peaches are at the height of their season now, and, good as they are preserved in win t months, they should by no means be neglected at their prime freshness.

Concerning tamale chicken in today's list, Mrs. Frank Stamm says:

"Church workers, take notice. Give a tamale chicken dinner to get those needed funds for your church. You will find this a dish especially favored by men-folks."

Prudence Penny awards 13 prizes daily, a $5 first prize and five $1 prizes. Send in as many recipes as you like. Write on only one side of the paper, with your name and address, unfailingly, on the top of each sheet. No recipes can be returned. Send yours in now. Today's prize winners are listed below:

Five Dollar Prize Winner

MRS. HELEN PARKS,
320 Kenneth street, Greensburg.
VEAL ROLLS WITH MUSHROOM SAUCE

Veal steak.
One-fourth cup mushrooms.
Two tablespoons butter.
One teaspoon chopped parsley.
One-half cup bread crumbs.
One-fourth teaspoon poultry seasoning.
One tablespoon grated onion.

Saute mushrooms in butter; stir in bread crumbs and seasonings. Season veal. Wipe sheet, cut in strips, two inches wide and four inches long. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, and roll with dressing. Put a spoonful of dressing on each piece of veal. Wrap the veal around and fasten in place with string or tooth picks. Sear in a small amount of fat. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees), until tender, about one hour. Baste frequently with melted butter and boiling water combined in equal proportions. Serve plain or with creamed mushroom sauce.

MUSHROOM SAUCE.

Saute in butter one-half pound mushrooms. Sprinkle lightly with two tablespoons flour and add one-half cup milk and one-half cup cream. Season well and cook over boiling water, stirring occasionally until sauce is smooth and thickened.

Five $1 Prize Winners

MRS. M. M. BROWN,
200 Ridge street, South Brownsville,
COUNTY DURHAM BAKED HAM

One ham, nine to 11 pounds.
One and one-half pints bread stuffing.
One cup very dry sugar.
One bunch parsley for garnishing.

Put ham on fire in a large kettle and let it simmer, allowing half an hour to a pound, and an extra half hour for good measure. But do not let it boil. Skim off the top water once in a while and renew the water with a dipper of cold water as the water cooks away. When the time is up, take the kettle from the fire and let the ham cool in the water. It will be all right to let the ham stay over night in the water, then remove the skins and rub away most of the fat. Take out the bone by cutting around it with a sharp knife. Fill the opening with stuffing and cover the ham with the brown sugar half an inch thick and put it in a moderate oven for half an hour, basting it with the sugar as it runs off. The oven must not be too hot or the sugar will burn. In making the stuffing, use dry bread, baker's preferred, seasoned to your taste with salt, sage and thyme, using no liquid and no butter. When browned sufficiently, serve from a large platter garnished generously with parsley.

MRS. B. DeWALT,
305 West Ninth avenue, Tarentum.
BLITZ KUCHEN.

One cup sugar.
One cup shortening.
One-half cup milk.
One cup flour.
One cup chopped walnuts.
One-fourth cup chopped maraschino cherries.
One teaspoon baking powder.
One teaspoon vanilla.
Four eggs.

Blend shortening with one cup sugar. Beat in egg yolks one at a time. Add milk and flavoring. Sift flour and baking powder together, and add to mixture. Spread in two square cake pans, well greased and floured. Sprinkle with chopped nuts. Make a stiff meringue with the whites of the eggs and one cup of sugar. Spread this over nuts and bake in moderate oven. (350 degrees Fahrenheit.) When baked spread top of meringue of first layer with apricot jam. Turn second layer up-side down so that the jam is between the two meringues. Cover cake with whipped cream and garnish with chopped cherries.

Fill bottom with peeled and quartered peaches. Sprinkle with sugar and lemon juice. Pour batter over peaches. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) about 30 minutes. MRS. FRANK STAMM,

TAMALE CHICKEN

Four or five-pound chicken.
One quart can hominy.
One pint bottle ripe olives, sliced.
One large onion, cut fine.
Two heaping tablespoons flour.
Two heaping tablespoons lard.
One heaping teaspoon Spanish pepper.
Salt to taste.

Boil chicken. When done, pick meat from bones and cut in pieces a little larger than for chicken salad. Put hominy through food chopper. Fry onion in lard until done, but not brown. Add flour to onion, add the liquid in which the chicken was cooked to make gravy. Add teaspoon Spanish pepper or more to taste. Add the salt. Put chicken in gravy. Place layer of chicken mixture in baking pan, a layer of hominy, a layer of olives, then another layer of chicken and hominy and the remaining olives on top.

Bake half hour in moderate oven or until brown.

Fancy Jam Jars.

When making preserves or pickles why not use some of your fancy jars and bowls as well as the orthodox jam jars? Many housewives have quite a store of china and glass which they seldom use, and here is a way of utilizing it. Providing the glass or china is not particularly valuable, it is good plan to pour jam or pickle straight into it. This obviates the necessity for constantly turning out the jam or pickle for table use and washing up the dishes afterwards.

We'd like the frock in either silk or wool.

Through the Spyglass

You little shoppers who want to learn the names of the shops whose items are listed in this column day by day . . . call GRANT 4500 . . . and ASK FOR THE SPY GLASS. Or send in a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your reply. THE SPY GLASS is always on the alert, peering out new "finds" . . . and you will be answered promptly!

Turn and turnabout is fair play . . . and where it applies to a new dress we think that it's even better yet, especially when the price is only $12.98!

For imagine a frock that can be worn frontwards or backwards equally well . . . that "does" a coat-dress for your benefit one way, with a wraparound skirt that buttons down the side . . . and a straight-up-and-down number on the other. White pique cuffs at the wrists smarten it up and a V-collar in one direction and a round one in the other at the top finish off the good work. Black wool crepe . . . caricca rust . . . pine green . . . brown . . . in sizes for juniors, 11 to 17.

Lighting your way to autumn table or console smartness come these new Czecho-Slovakian candlesticks in amber glass (somehow reminiscent of the early American hobnail glass). In squatty fat-bellied ones that are a law unto themselves in that they can be turned upside down to serve as grand posey vases! $2.25 the pair, and a bargain when you think that for this price you're getting two candlesticks AND two flower vases!

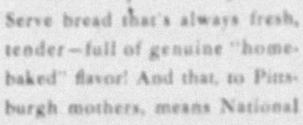
First in town . . . and therefore first in the hearts of a great many of our country-women! The store that has the new lapin coats stenciled so that they're almost "dead-ringers" for the costly, exquisite, and much-longed-for Summer ermine!

Some bright soul thought up the idea and did something about it. So that now we girls with the champagne tastes and beer pocketbooks can still amble 'round feeling good about ourselves!

These coats are the soft beige of Summer ermine (they're clipped lapin) and have been stenciled so that the indistinct stripe is noticeable as it is in genuine soft, warm, ultramarine in their full-length or "bolero" swagger style of ¾—you'll love them . . . for all fur coat occasions. Priced from $85 to $95, which certainly is reasonable!



Suggestion for the first Fall bridge party . . . an even for the school girl that could use a smart little box for this or that! A shop is selling real red cedar boxes for 50c . . . in two sizes, about 4x6 inches or 4x4—if our old eyes haven't gone back on us! Nice size to tuck into the corner of a trunk . . . nice little gadget to give as a bridge prize. With metal strap hinges.

Pant! . . . pant! . . . our tongue is out, our paws are tired, we're all agog over the news that we've just unearthed about the beauty shop in town that's featuring croquignole permanent waves for the outlandishly low price of $1.50!

For this wave includes a finger wave as well! Both it and the permanent are given by skilful operators . . . with the assistance of every modern hair-dressing device! So that you come "out from under" all shimmering and supple-ised as to your little wig . . . and all perked up as to your personal feelings! $1.50 for a LIMITED TIME ONLY! . . . for a real croquignole!

Ignoring Symptoms of Cancer a Common Fault

Cancer of the breast is not common, but unfortunately it is often neglected. Too many times the value of this disturbance results in a physician only after the disease has become deeply and possibly beyond cure. Not by any means is cancer incurable when recognized in its early stages. Proper operative treatment will give complete relief in most cases. This is particularly true of cancer of the breast.

Dr. Copeland

At the annual convention of the American Medical Association, in Cleveland, the importance of early discovery of and attention to tumors of the breast was stressed. It was stated that if women were properly examined within a few weeks after the onset of the symptoms, the chance for the development of the disease would be materially reduced. Besides, a great deal of physical pain and mental suffering would be prevented.

A new method for detecting cancer of the breast was demonstrated at the convention in Cleveland. It is called the "transillumination test" and has met with some success. By means of a special device a beam of light is directed through the breast. When the tissues are normal the light is transmitted equally. In certain irregular disturbances there is interference with the passage of light. In cases of cancer distribution of the light is irregular and this is said to be characteristic of tumor formations.

Another dependable means of determining whether or not the growth is cancerous is by the removal of a small section of the tissue. This is examined under the microscope for cancer cells.

Very rarely cancer strikes without warning and proceeds with great rapidity. But in most cases of cancer of the breast there are unmistakable and early signs of its existence. These signs should always be heeded. If you have the slightest doubt I beg you to consult with your physician.

There we may be sure cancer of the breast will be recognized in its earliest stage.

GOWDY SEES TOUGH BATTLE AHEAD FOR GIANTS

James J. Long's Sports Comment

IT LOOKS AS though something unforeseen happened to cause a sudden change of mind on the part of the Cub owners, who have just re-appointed Charley Grimm as manager for 1935. The story that the skids had been greased for Grimm was more than a rumor. It came right out of the feedbox. The Bruin bosses felt that they should have won the pennant after spending a fortune for Chuck Klein and others and were all set to ditch Grimm next winter, if not immediately. Perhaps Gabby Hartnett was voted down and the owners couldn't get the other pilot they wanted.

Charles Grimm

At that, Grimm deserved the reappointment. It isn't his fault that the Cubs haven't made a better showing. He has had more tough luck in the incapacitation of valuable players than any other skipper of the year.

Schmeling Comes Back

THOUGH WALTER NEUSEL may have hurt his own chances by using wrong tactics, it must be admitted that Max Schmeling showed a surprising recovery of much of his old stuff in stopping Neusel in eight rounds.

Evidently the Hamas and Paulino fights, in which he performed so poorly, served to put Schmeling back on the right road. Max must be reckoned with now. He has regained his place among the heavyweight contenders, and his return to form helps the class.

First Test Holds Fate

THE HITTING SUCCESS or failure of Julius Solters, Pittsburgh member of the Red Sox outfield, against various American League pitchers, appears to depend entirely on what he does when facing them for the first time. When Solters first batted against Alvin Crowder, he made a home run. He has been hitting Crowder ever since. In the first game of a recent double-header with the Tigers, Julius walloped the General for a single, double, triple and home run. But in the second game, against Elden Auker, he failed to knock the ball out of the infield.

Julius Solters

Solters is just another exhibit in support of the contention that psychology is a weighty factor in baseball. The Pittsburgher is unable to hit pitchers who stop him the first time he meets them. But let him hit them in the introductory encounters, and they're his cousins ever after.

Old Trojan Picks Pitt

ONE OF THE Southern California football stars of earlier days, Jim Smith, who used to play end when Gus Henderson was coach, picks Pitt to defeat the Trojans in the big game here on October 13. He goes further and predicts that U. S. C. will lose two other games this year to California and Stanford.

Smith bases his Panther victory dope on the fact that the game comes so early in the season. He contends that Coach Howard Jones can't have a good line at the start—can't replace Rosenberg, Youel, Stevens, Palmer, Erskine and Bright without a few games in which to experiment—but admits that Jones probably will have the line clicking in great style by the time Notre Dame is met on December 8. The old end rates that game a toss-up.

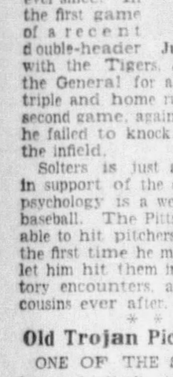
Sutherland Not Fooled

FORECASTS OF TROJAN disaster may or may not be intended as bear stories for the benefit of Dr. J. B. Sutherland, but they won't go over in any event. Jock knows that the Trojans under Jones, beaten only 11 times in nine seasons, never have lost as many as three games in one schedule, and he doesn't expect to meet anything but a team fully up to Southern California's lofty standards of the past.



Howard Jones

Sutherland has a lot of rebuilding of his own to do in replacing eight lost regulars, so he won't have any advantage over Jones in that respect. Mr. Jones himself, who, incidentally, celebrated his 49th birthday anniversary last Tuesday, appears to be not at all worried. While vacationing and playing golf now and then, he has been observed fussing with his famous poker chips, which represent various means of springing Cotton Warburton loose. Stopping the Scooter will be just as big a job for Pitt as it was for all other Trojan foes in the last two seasons.

BRUINS DEFEAT GIANTS, GAIN ON LEADERS

Associated Press.

Bill Terry hurt a few feelings in Brooklyn last winter when he asked, as a wise crack, if the Dodgers were still in the National League. Now he must be thankful they are.

The Dodgers knocked off Chicago twice and nearly made it three straight last week while the Giants were struggling with St. Louis and that is the principal reason why Terry's club remained 5½ games ahead after taking a 7-to-1 drubbing yesterday in the opener of a highly important series in Chicago.

An overflow crowd of 43,000 saw the Cubs open their pennant bid behind the three-hit pitching of Lonnie Warneke. Manager Charley Grimm, who had just received a vote of confidence from the management in the renewal of his contract for 1935, led the attack with a double and two singles for a perfect day at bat and drove in the first two runs.

The Dodgers kept the Cardinals from registering any important gain by holding the third-place club to an even break in a doubleheader. Brooklyn won the opener, 11 to 5. St. Louis came back to pound Les Munns for a 7-to-2 decision.

Lou Gehrig's three home runs and the Yankee pitching that went with them to give New York a double victory over Chicago, 9 to 5 and 2 to 0, were the high spots of the American League program, although the Tigers pulled their favorite stunt of coming from behind to win from the Athletics in 10 innings, 7 to 6.

After the score had been tied three times, Detroit beat the A's in the tenth on the last of eight walks granted by Bill Dietrich and a double by Charley Gehringer.

The St. Louis Browns spurted into a fifth-place tie with Washington in the junior circuit by winning both games, 3 to 0 and 9 to 5. George Blaeholder pitched a two-hit masterpiece in the opener and Jack Knott blanked the Senators for eight more innings before they scored all their runs in the ninth.

Cleveland and Boston broke even in their third-place struggle, the Indians winning the opener, 3 to 2, as Oral Hildebrand bested Wes Ferrell on the hill and the Red Sox pounding Mel Harder for a 5-to-2 decision in the second.

LITTLE BUCCOS WIN DUEL

Peckman shaded Coffman in a pitchers' battle at McKeesport yesterday, and the Little Bucs eked out a 3-2 decision over Charleroi in a Penn State Association game. Peckman pitched seven-hit ball. The game set a new record for the league, taking only one hour and 11 minutes to play.

Greensburg took first place by defeating Monessen in two games at Monessen, 15-4 and 3-2. Jeannette and Washington split even, Jeannette winning the first, 4-3, and Washington the second, 2-0.

Johnstown takes up today where Dayton left off in the current Middle Atlantic League drive to bump the Zanesville Greys out of first place.

As the Ducks took the third and deciding game of their Zanesville series last night, 4-0, they cut the Greys' lead down to five games.

Two errors by Young helped the Ducks to their first three runs.

As the Greys open up against the third-place Jawns, the Huntington Red Birds, with an unbroken string of eight victories, take on the last-place Wheeling club, which has been able to win only [illegible] games since the start of the season's second half.

The Red Birds' eighth victory came last night with a 19-2 decision over the Springfield Pirates.

80,000 TO SEE STARS, PROS

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—The 1934 football season will get under way Friday night—about a month ahead of schedule—when the Chicago Bears, National Professional champions, and a squad of all-stars from 1933 college elevens clash at Soldier Field before an attendance which promises to reach 80,000.

The college squad began putting the final polish on its offense today, under the direction of Head Coach Nobel Kizer, of Purdue, and his aides, Dick Hanley, of Northwestern, and Jimmy Crowley, of Fordham. The Bears

Kizer and his staff have primed the ex-collegiates for the first game of the kind ever arranged with the Notre Dame system, and the practice sessions indicate that forward passes will be abundant. Bernie Masterson, of Nebraska, has been doing most of the throwing, with such prize snatchers as Joe Skladany, of Pittsburgh; Fred Canarius, of St. Mary's; Bill Smith, of Washington; Beattie Feathers, of Tennessee, and Ed. Manske, of Northwestern, on the receiving end.

America's Cup History

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 27.—(AP.)—The America's Cup committee today ordered Rainbow and Yankee to race today despite the failure of more than a light breeze to blow up. A like failure caused postponement of yesterday's scheduled trial. The wind was from the northwest.

The two racing yachts, Rainbow, skippered by Harold S. Vanderbilt, and Yankee, by Charles Francis Adams, former secretary of the Navy, are the sole survivors, the committee already having eliminated Frederick Prince's Weetamoe as a contender.

Almost every one is now satisfied that if Yankee, skippered by Charles Francis Adams, former Navy Secretary, can defeat Rainbow in the next race or two, the Boston boat will be selected and the trials abruptly ended. Yankee has piled up a top-heavy collection of victories throughout the summer, and only a reversal of form can now deprive her of the privilege of meeting the British challenger, Tom Sopwith's Endeavour.

The cup boats were idle yesterday because of an absence of a sailing breeze.

ORIGIN OF RACE

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—They were planning a great industrial exposition in England in 1850.

With the idea of covering all ramifications of industrial endeavor, a group of British businessmen suggested to some New York confreres that they send an American fore-and-aft-rigged yacht to England as a specimen of what the United States had in the way of mrderate-sized boats.

Racing was in its infancy in this country. The New York Yacht Club then was only in its seventh year, but six of its members formed a syndicate, had a yacht, "The America," designed and built by George Steers and sailed her across the Atlantic to Cowes.

The America, weighing 170 tons, took on 14 member yachts of the Royal Yacht Squadron and finished 18 minutes ahead of her closest pursuer, winning the classic Squadron Cup.

Seven years later, after discarding the idea of melting the trophy and striking off medals, the five surviving members of the syndicate offered the cup, valued at about $500, to the New York Yacht Club as a perpetual trophy. The gift specified that it was to be the property of the club and that any organized yacht club should always be entitled, through one or more of its members, to claim the right of sailing a match for it with yachts of not less than 30 nor more than 300 tons.

Since then the deed of gift has been changed twice, altered to cover conditions as time marched on, but the intent of the original owners, all of whom have passed on, has been strictly respected.

In this manner, the international yachting series known as "The America's Cup Races" was conceived.

Pittsburgher Winner In Casting Meet

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Charles W. Ward, of Pittsburgh, yesterday won the ⅝-ounce bait casting event, concluding feature of the national casting tournament, with an average of 98, which included eight perfect casts out of ten tries.

Tony Acetta, Cleveland, won his second championship of the tournament by taking the wet fly accuracy event in a runoff after tying Judge E. E. Cavanaugh, Fort Dodge, Ia., and R. Deluse, Fort Dodge, with a 97.

Hero of '14 Series Blames Bucs, Braves For New York Lead

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Twenty years ago this date the Boston Braves were approaching the climax of the greatest pennant drive in baseball history. Today the most heroic figure of that wild dash, the intervening years resting lightly on his fair hair, insisted that the Giants "were not in yet, by any means."

Hank Gowdy is as straight as an arrow and hardly any heavier than when he broke up one world series game after another back in 1914. A McKechnie lieutenant in the handling of the current Braves, Hankus Pankus is sure of his ground when he says the Giants still have a rough road to travel. He talks from experience, said Gowdy:

"The Giants are a fine ball club, but they are not out of the woods. Personally, I look for some exciting developments in September. The New York team ought to win, but a lot of things can happen in five weeks of hard campaigning."

BUCS, BRAVES EASY

Hank brought out the fact that the Giants are enjoying a big lead largely by virtue of their consistent victories over the Braves and Pirates. He remarked:

"Had the Pirates and our club been up to their customary mettle while engaging the Giants, the race today would be a most exciting affair."

Gowdy and his buddies have a vision of finishing as high as second place. They point out that they will play through most of September on their home grounds, where they are tough opponents for anybody.

McKechnie's smart hustlers came from behind yesterday to take a fall out of our Pirates and thereby enhanced their hold on fourth place. The Tribe had a lead of four and one-half games on the slipping Oaklanders.

ERRORS HURT BUCS

The debacle at Forbes Field yesterday, when the Pirates lost, 8 to 5, was due to more of the inferior pitching which has begun to get on the nerves of Pittsburgh fans, together with another outbreak of loose fielding on the part of Shortstop Arky Vaughan, who had two more ill-timed errors.

To state the real facts the immediate future of the Buccos is gloomy for the reason that there is nothing to indicate the pitching will improve and Vaughan's consistent boots are most discouraging.

Red Lucas made another disappointing start in the opener with the Braves. The small Sunday gathering saw Red shelled off the hill in the fifth, Vaughan's error helping Red to the shower. Hal Smith, Waite Hoyt and Ralph Birkofer all had a crack at the slab job before the battle ended.

It was Hoyt's misfortune to get to the mound in time to feel the spleen of Randy Moore's pinch double of the seventh which cleaned off the bases and really won the contest. Waite had pitched a full game and emerged a victor on the previous afternoon, but Manager Traynor was so hard put for pitchers after Smith had nicked Frank Hogan with a pitch he called upon the willing pitcher, who seems to have gone to the well once too often.

Frankhouse, Mangum and Cantell pitched the game for the invaders. The first named suffered a slight injury and had to leave the game early, Mangum receiving credit for the victory after pitching up to the seventh.

Commercials and Shamrocks Clash This Evening For Senior Softball Championship

Winner of Battle To Earn Trip To Chicago

By PHIL GRABOWSKI
Softball Tournament Secretary

The thrice postponed Campbell Shamrock - Commercial Garage game for the senior division championship of Western Pennsylvania is to be played at 6 o'clock this evening at Greenlee Field in the finale of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's first annual amateur softball tournament, which was begun 10 weeks ago. Ninety-six teams competed in the tourney with girls, junior and intermediate division champions being crowned last week.

The senior class conflict originally was scheduled for last Wednesday as part of a doubleheader in which the Gabbel Cycles won the intermediate title, but rain put a stop to the Shamrock-Commercial contest in the first inning. The game was rescheduled for Friday and again rain caused a postponement. The championship contest then was tentatively billed for Saturday, but the managers of both teams reported they were unable to assemble the players because they were regularly employed and could not get the afternoon off from work.

TRIP TO CHICAGO

The West Penn senior champion will be sent to Chicago to compete in the national tournament, opening September 8, as a guest of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. A beautiful silver trophy will be awarded the senior titlist.

Tickets which were sold for last Wednesday's doubleheader will not be honored, but tickets disposed of Friday and Saturday will be accepted. Tickets for the championship game can be purchased for the nominal sum of 25 cents at the lobby in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Building and at the downtown office at Fifth avenue and Market street until 2 o'clock this afternoon. After 2 o'clock, tickets will be available at Greenlee Field. Tencent tickets for registered tournament players will not be put on sale at Greenlee Field.

Anthony (Bullet) Oskin, tall Shamrock flinger, who has established two records so far this season when he pitched three successive shutout victories in Bracket III play and ran up his string of scoreless innings to 35, has won all 10 games for the Campbells, five of them via the shutout route. Oskin will take the mound against the slugging Commercials this evening. Although Manager Max Rosenberg has not disclosed his pitcher, he has only two flingers to choose from and they are Irving Brenner, former Duquesne University basketball star, and William (Hooks) Jordan. If Brenner pitches Jordan will play first base or visa versa.

In their climb to the championship game, the Commercials won 10 out of 11 games. The Rosenbergs had to play eight games in Bracket V because they finished in a deadlock for the leadership with the Fort Black Community Club, which was beaten in the playoff.

CAMPBELLS UNBEATEN

The Campbells have not been defeated in tournament play. They defeated Wilmore, Adams Bottles and Weise Newsies in the playoff series while the Commercials gained victories over the American Fruit Growers, Glenfield A. A. and the S. A. O'Tooles, of Hazelwood.

The winning team will be presented the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph trophy and will represent Western Pennsylvania in the national championship play at Chicago, September 8-9-10. Finalists Evenly Matched; Oskin To Pitch

Both the Shamrocks and Commercials are evenly matched in the infield and outfield, but the East End entry appears to be a slight favorite because it appears to have an edge in the pitching department.

Dominick Bartirome, who has been playing the outfield, has been shifted to the infield to play third base, while Johnny Metz, regular third base guardian, has been shifted to right field for the Hill district aggregation. Bartirome, Louis (Lemons) Pugliano, who thrilled high school basketball followers with his brilliant floor play, shortstop; Joey DeBattista, clever second baseman, and Jordan or Brenner, at first, comprise the Commercial infield. Third Baseman Leo Yellen, former Peabody High School star athlete; Paul Landau, who starred at baseball for Schenley High, at shortstop; Joe Massimino, second baseman, and Harry Belansky round out the Shamrocks' quartet.

Howard Atkinson, Carey Wincko, Harry Langford and Chester Lanford play the outfield for the Campbells, while Charles Rubinoff, Leo Yimin, Johnny Metz and Vince Del Greco make up the Commercials' outfield. Henry Miller, of the Shamrocks, and Philip Albert, of the Commercials, will see action behind the plate in this evening's embroglio. Both are fine catchers.

SOFTBALL SLANTS

Manager Johnny Goodry takes his Senha A. C. team of the South Side to Liverpool to play the East Palestine in the second round of the Inter-State ball tournament tonight. Tourney games are being staged nightly.

The Adams Bottle team, of New Kensington, is eager to book softball games with first-class teams. Call Bradley at New Kensington, 2267-J, or Smith at New Kensington 9445.

The Modern Florist girls' team, of East Pittsburgh, scored a 12-11 victory over the West Newton Scholastics, winner of the girls' division championship in the Sun-Telegraph's amateur softball tournament. Betty McClelland pitched for the winners, played a great game.

SCHMELING TO RETURN TO U.S. IN QUEST OF LOST TITLE

100,000 SEE MAXIE STOP NEUSEL

HAMBURG, Germany, Aug. 27.—(AP)—Undisputed kingpin of German heavyweights once more, Max Schmeling turned his attention today to the United States and the possibility of a world championship match with Max Baer.

The black Uhlan of the Rhine emerged from comparative fistic obscurity yesterday to batter down Walter Neusel, blond Teuton youngster in an savage bout fought before more than 100,000 spectators.

Schmeling's victory, gained on a technical knockout when Neusel failed to answer the bell for the ninth round, carried with it the German heavyweight title.

SAILS NEXT MONTH

Much more important was the effect it might have on Schmeling's chances of getting a shot at the world title. Schmeling plans to sail for the United States next month and undoubtedly will figure in negotiations designed to find an opponent for Baer's first title defense next summer.

Neusel, Schmeling said, was "easy to beat." He said:

"I knew I had him after the first round. I beat him at his own game—infighting.

"The trouble with Walter is that he's just a beginner. Moreover he is no puncher."

Schmeling said he was in better condition than ever and he attributes this to the fact he has had three fights within a year. He added:

"I have got to have that many to keep in shape. The trouble before was that I fought only once a year. Against Neusel I found myself working like a machine with a good eye, good timing. If I ever have another chance at Baer I won't make the same mistake. I made the last time, letting Baer box me instead of my boxing him."

WAGES HEADY FIGHT

Schmeling won the heavyweight championship on a foul from Jack Sharkey in 1930 and lost it by decision two years later. He was labeled as "through" by some experts after he had been stopped by Baer in 10 rounds in 1933; outpointed by Steve Hamas and held to a draw by Paulino Uzcudun earlier this year.

Max fought a heady fight against Neusel, the youngster who had campaigned so successfully in the United States last year. He left Neusel do all the leading and then stepped in with stiff body counters that sapped the youngster's strength. Schmeling opened up cuts on Neusel's face as early as the second round, ripped open a gash over Walter's right eye in the fourth, and hammered away at his body without a letup in the first seven rounds.

NEUSEL BATTERED

As Neusel obviously was tiring fast, Schmeling leaped to the attack in the eighth round, battered his foe to the ropes and handed him a terrific trouncing until the bell sounded.

Neusel was out on his feet as he walked slowly to his corner. His seconds, including the American, Jimmy Bronson, worked over him frantically, but Neusel could not answer the bell for the ninth round, and Schmeling was awarded the victory on a technical knockout.

Schmeling outboxed Neusel all the way and had little or no trouble in blocking the younger man's wild swings nor in tying him up tight in the clinches.

Schmeling weighed 193.8 pounds; Neusel, 198.

BAER SURPRISED

OAKLAND, Cal., Aug. 27.—(INS.)—Max Baer heavyweight champion, declined today to discuss prospects of a fight with Max Schmeling, the former champion, who staged a successful comeback in Hamburg, Germany, by scoring a technical knockout over Walter Neusel.

Baer was surprised at Schmeling's victory. He had picked Neusel to win. Baer exclaimed:

"Can you imagine that? I guess I'm just a bum picker."

The big fighter is visiting his parents in nearby San Leandro.

Tex Rickard Touch Marks Promoters' Gamble On Making Success of Yarosz Title Fight

Gate of $50,000 Necessary to Avoid Loss

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor

Can Pittsburgh successfully stage a world championship boxing bout—the first in its history—without loss to the promoters?

This is the question the local fans have been asking themselves ever since Ray Babcock, Bus Vogel and their partners closed their aggressive Vince Dundee - Ted Yarosz title bout for Forbes Field, September 11.

Ray Babcock

Dundee is getting the astounding guarantee of $25,000 for the bout. Yarosz is receiving 15 per cent of the gross receipts, plus $500 for training expenses. Forbes Field is getting 12½ per cent of the gate for rent. Preliminaries, tickets, headquarters and other incidental promotion expenses run up the total.

NEED $50,000 GATE

Almost $50,000 will have to be taken in to get the promoters out of the red. Can it be done? There are many skeptics. In answer to their doubts, Promoter Babcock merely smiles and says:

"We'll see."

Continuing, he remarks:

"They say it can't be done. We'll try. You'll have to admit one thing. If we put it over we'll deserve a lot of credit. There always has to be a first time for everything. We're the pioneers."

There are precedents to establish the fact that game promoters can turn the trick.

RICKARD'S MAGIC TOUCH

The late Tex Rickard has furnished most of these. He put up a fancy guarantee to lure Joe Gans and Battling Nelson into a lightweight championship battle in his first promotion at Goldfield, Nev., many years ago. He also put up huge guarantees for a Jack Johnson-Jim Jeffries bout at Reno, in 1910. In 1916, he broke into New York and financed a Jess Willard-Frank Moran title bout in the old Madison Square Garden, and his promotion of the Jack Dempsey-Georges Carpentier international battle at Boyle's Thirty Acres in Jersey City, was the ballyhoo epic of the sport.

For that fight, Rickard guaranteed Dempsey, the champion, $300,000 and Carpentier $200,000—a cool half-million dollar purse. His partners, Billy Brady, the theatrical producer and former manager of champions, and Charley Cochran, the English producer, took a runout on him and apparently left him holding the bag, but Tex dug up new backing and went through with the show and grossed more than a million and half dollars.

PAST GATES RECALLED

Considering the fact that the largest gate for a show in Pittsburgh to obtain, in the flush times of 1923, was only a little more than $300,000 for a Mike Ford benefit elbows featuring Jack Britt and Cyclone DeMaro, and that the next largest gate was the $21,000 for the first meeting between Yarosz and Dundee at Forbes Field last August and that some $13,000 of this was contributed by 11 cutrunners, some idea of the gigantic hawk faced by the present promoters, may be obtained. They are banking on the selling qualities of Pittsburgh's first world championship bills to put them over, plus the fact that Yarosz already has beaten Dundee twice before (the latter won the title from Lou Brouillard, who appeared three local fans by stopping Anton Growem last week.

The general belief is that Yarosz is sure bet to repeat and become the fourth world middleweight champion from Western Pennsylvania, the others having been Frankie Klaus, George Chip and the lamented Harry Greb, and the fans like him all in on the crowning of a new champion. It gives them something to talk about in the years to come.

INTERESTING ANGLE

However, there is one big "if" in the forthcoming bout. It concerns whether or not Yarosz will be as effective over the 15-round route as Tex was in his two 10-rounders with Dundee. Those last five rounds may make it an entirely different story, for Dundee is a crafty warrior accustomed to the long romance. He may come like the wind and the finish and wipe out any margin Teddy may be able to accumulate in the first 10 rounds.

There can be no denying that this is an interesting angle and that the bout packs more than a peck of glamour for the home town fans, who will be rooting hard for Yarosz to win.

MIRACLE MEN PILOT MAJOR LEADERS

By BILL CORUM

Baseball people are traditionally superstitious about mentioning the world series until their pennant is a mathematical certainty. But that is no reason for the rest of us to shy away from the subject, so for the purpose of today's fanning bee let us take it for granted that the New York Giants will be squared away against the Detroit Tigers, when what has so often and so unoriginally been called the October classic gets under way.

In the case of the Tigers it is generally to be hoped that Hugo will prove no prematurity. But the chances are greatly against it. The way the situation shapes up now, young Mr. Shirley Rowe could just about touch his slate under his arm and quit out and pitch them into the series all by himself if necessary.

It will, of course, be the first time the Giants ever crossed bats with the Tigers in a series. Detroit having fined its three strikes and out in world's series competition in 1907, 1908 and 1909.

LONG OVERDUE

After that four 25 long lean years, or until Mr. Mickey Himself Cochrane marched into town playing his saxophone at the head of a one-man band, the "motor city" turned out more earnestness than it did base hits. For almost as long as current opponent can remember, Detroit was just a town in which nine stopped while swinging around the American League loop with the Yankees. From a baseball standpoint that was pray understand me.

Almost without exception the Detroit team was made up of a hard hitting outfield and a half dozen guys. Them Charley Gehringers came along and there was a second baseman to go with the outfield. And what a second baseman! The best now beyond question. A second baseman to take his just and rightful place among the Lajoies, the Evers, the Collinses, the Hornbys and the Frisches of the game.

Charley came to the Tigers under Ty Cobb, as I recall, and stayed on to fight shoulder to shoulder with Detroit's second great diamond hero, the aforementioned miracle man Cochrane.

TERRY CAPABLE LEADER

But speaking of miracle men we'll have out own candidate in the coming world series and it will not be Mr. Terry. It will be our own Col. Bill Terry, who can chant a dulcet tenor for every saccharine note Mister Cochrane lures from his saxophone, and who apparently is capable of winning ball game for ball game with any manager any National pastime has yet produced.

It is a trifle too early to begin rating the Memphis man with the likes of the McGraws, Chances, Marks and Hugginses. But he is gaiting a cool 1,000 per cent in the managerial league at this writing, and you will no doubt recall what the schoolboy said about that. He said it wasn't good, it was perfect, didn't he?

Now the strange part about the Colonel is that when he was pitched into the managership of the Giants by the dramatic resignation of John McGraw, nobody believed in him. Nobody at any rate, except Terry himself and, just possibly, C. A. Stoneham, who owns the Giants.

What McGraw really thought of Bill as a major league pilot I could never find out, although the story always had it that John selected him as his successor. But there were only two things that the New York front office knew for sure about William Harold Terry when it named him manager of the Giants. The first was that he was a great first baseman; the second that he was a shrewd business man.

He had made Stoneham and McGraw meet his terms as a star player too often for them to be fooled about his judgment of values. He knew what he was worth and he always got it to the final farthing.

It is not at all surprising to those who knew him that Terry has proved the most economical and best bargainer of the managers. If he lasted on the job he was a sure thing to see that.

What has surprised at least one onlooker, the writer, is the close harmony and esprit de corps he has built up on his ball team. Terry's was a much tougher job, for instance, than Cochrane's. It is more difficult for a fellow who has been marching in the ranks to take command of an outfit, than it is for a newcomer. There are always prejudices and jealousies and whatnot to overcome when a man moves up from the ranks.

FILLED TOUGH TASK

There were other factors that seemed to bar Terry's way to success at the time. He was succeeding the second most popular figure New York baseball had ever known, meaning McGraw. The first would be Babe Ruth. Bill's own tact had sometimes been tried and found wanting. And then there was the old argument that the Giants were going to ruin a star player to make a bad manager.

Even last fall when in his enthusiasm over a quick and brilliant but to him expensive, triumph against Washington in the series, Stoneham promptly signed Terry to a long term contract, there were those who shook their heads. They said:

"Beginner's luck. Stoneham will be sorry he grew so enthusiastic when he cools off."

Nor did it honestly look as though the Giants were a team to win right over again. But win right over again is what they are doing with Terry proving even more brilliant as a leader this year than he was last.

To the Sports Editor:

I think that Russian idea of putting objects of persons fined for walking on the grass, in public parks, is funny. I saw a picture of one and it shows a young woman playing a mandolin. It is supposed to make people laugh. I think, at the foolish people who disobey such laws. I was trying to picture such a thing over in our country. I think I would like to see effigies of persons who spit on the sidewalks put up on all prominent street corners. If there is one bird who burns me up it is the one who spits on the sidewalk.

NUSSLEIN PRO TENNIS KING

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN
Staff Correspondent

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—Hans Nusslein, crack young German racquet artist, outplayed and outlasted Karel Kozeluh, veteran master from Czecho-Slovakia, 6-4, 6-2, 1-6, 7-5, in the singles final of the eighth annual United States professional tennis championships here yesterday. Nusslein's victory arrived as a climax to a week of sound, powerful play on the part of the Teuton, who thus won his initial American national title. Kozeluh was bidding for his third crown.

Breaks of Kozeluh's service in the third and seventh games gave Nusslein set one. Karel dropped delivery in game three of the second set, retrieved in the fourth, then lapsed to drop four in a row as Nusslein applied pressure with sweeping drives backed by incursions to the net. Nusslein bogged down signally after breaking through Kozeluh in game three of the third set, and blew the canto in a succession of glaring errors—the only wild spot in the match.

The German came back strongly in the vital fourth frame, however, and though he lost service at 15-40 in game five, he promptly recouped as he turned on the heat to overcome a 30-love Kozeluh advance. With games at 4-all, Nusslein was down at love-40, pushing hard. He pulled up to 30-40 on two hostile errors whereupon followed a rally that saw the pellet cross the barrier 31 times by actual count. Nusslein terminated the exchange by pouncing on a short, high return and thereafter Kozeluh was definitely on the skids.

The youthful St. Louis-Memphis pair of Bruce Barnes and Emmett Pare annexed the doubles title with a decisive triumph over Ellsworth Vines, of Pasadena, and Paul Heston, of Washington, 6-1, 6-3, 7-5.

HUBBARD WINS PIGEON RACE

Hubbard, a fast racing homer from the C. & D. Loft, in Brookline, won the opening race of the South Hills Racing Pigeon Club from Coshocton, O., yesterday. Chorine, from the loft of M. Baldi, was second, while Traveler, carrying the colors of A. P. Greb, was third.

Joe Wood's Son Whiffs 19 to Win, 4 to 0

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Aug. 27.—(AP)—Joe Wood, Jr., still in his teens, gave a pitching exhibition yesterday reminiscent of the exploits of his father when a hurler for the old Boston Red Sox.

Young Wood struck out 19 men to pitch Morris Cove to a 4-to-0 victory over East Haven.

His father, now Yale baseball coach, is joint holder with Walter Johnson and Lefty Grove of the American League's record for consecutive victories which Schoolboy Rowe, of Detroit, equalled yesterday.

CADDIES PLAY FOR TEAM LAURELS

By TOM BIRKS

The caddie team, representing the Aspinwall Country Club, was defending its Western Pennsylvania team championship in the 18-hole medal play tournament which got under way at the Longue Vue Country Club this morning.

Two years ago the Aspinwall caddies won the title over their home layout and they still retain possession of the trophy inasmuch as no tournament was staged last year.

34 TEAMS ENTERED

Twenty-four teams are competing for the crown. At the conclusion of the medal play event, the Caddie Masters will be host-guest to the members of the Western Pennsylvania Golf Association.

Besides the team championship, a prize will be awarded the individual turning in the best card. Many of the youngsters are capable of shooting in the seventies, which fact alone promises a lot of interesting competition.

Another important golf event being disposed of today is the preamateur tournament the Caddie Masters and Assistant Professionals are staging with the members of the Shannopin Club over that course.

BIG FIELD CERTAIN

Warren Brown, general chairman of the one-day tournament for members of the Traffic Club, scheduled Wednesday at the Pittsburgh Field Club, reports that almost 300 entries will be on file in this event. A number of out-of-town golfers will be included in the starting field.

Many of the local professionals are thinking seriously of playing in the Hershey tournament, scheduled next Friday and Saturday. Vince Eldred, Nelson Zimmerman, Ted Luther, Perry Del Vecchio and Sam Parks are planning to invade Hershey in quest of the $3,000 in prize money. This is one of the most attractive tournaments to be staged in Pennsylvania and will draw the leading pros in the tri-state district.

J. M. Walsh defeated W. D. Reed 5 and 3 in their 36-hole match for the Duquesne Golf Club championship yesterday.

Dr. W. H. K. McDiarmid was crowned champion of the Wildwood Country Club yesterday when he defeated Joe Totten in the final round of 36 holes, 4 and 3. He succeeds S. C. Canteleo as champion. Results of the medal play and match play competitions staged yesterday follow:

As a result of the mishap, Matchmaker Jules Beck completed arrangements to have Ray Borree, hailed as the featherweight champion of Florida, to fill the vacancy on the card.

According to a wire received by Beck last night, Mullins was en route to Pittsburgh from Cincinnati when his machine crashed in Vincennes, Ind.

Borree, who has beaten Mullins, Frankie Covelli, Tony Leto and others of note, is matched to box Freddie Miller, the N.B.A. featherweight champion, at Nashville, Tenn., September 11.

Two other out-of-towners are being brought in for battles against home talent. Frankie Hughes, of Indianapolis, meets Tiger Joe Randall, Elizabeth Negro welterweight, in the semi-final, and K. O. Huber, of Cincinnati, goes against Mike Barto, New Kensington's lightweight knockerout. They're lightweights.

Marty Gornick, of Whitaker, engages Jackie Holt, of Homewood, in a welterweight six-rounder to open the show.

Dolphins to Compete In Water Polo Meet

The Duquesne Library Dolphins won the right to represent Pittsburgh in the national water polo meet to be held in New York next week when they defeated Monongahela in the A. M. A. tournament, concluded yesterday in the Willows Pool at Oakmont. The score was 6 to 1.

The national tournament will get under way shortly after Labor Day, probably at Jones Beach.

Both the Dolphins and Monongahelas are Duquesne Library representatives. They lined up as follows: Dolphins—Tombos, Segady, Brodi, Stinner, Krovac, Arbay and Madeya; Monongahelas—Aras, Semago, Masters, Obsince, Hleba, Lupes and Buckiso. Choate, captain of the Dolphins, did not play yesterday, but spent the day visiting his mother, ill in a hospital.

CHILLYSAUCE

Bill McKechnie and his Boston players were cheered today over a letter received by Catcher Al Spohrer and written by the irrepressible Rabbit Maranville. . . . The Rabbit apparently takes in turns in writing his teammates, for Hank Gowdy had one from his long time buddy on the present jaunt. . . . In his note to Spohrer, Maranville said:

"The bad leg has improved to such an extent that everything in it is solid again and it is going to be okay."

Boston fans are planning a big day for Maranville to be held next Sunday at Braves Field. . . . The Rabbit has promised to be on hand and it is likely that they will do something big for the injured veteran. . . . Randy Moore says Boston fans are in first place in any league when it comes to showing appreciation to a diamond performer. . . . Randy declared:

"Every time they put something on for a player in that town the lucky fellow feels it in many ways. . . . Not so long ago they gave Maranville a "day" and he was presented almost $5,000, besides a big auto."

The eyes of the Boston athletes light up with admiration when they speak of Maranville. . . . The whole troup is pepped up over the prospect of seeing the Rabbit at Braves Field next Sunday. . . . As Hank Gowdy put it:

"That little fellow will probably be out there playing on the infield again next year."

Pirate officials now plan to leave Cy Blanton, Bill Harris, Hal Finney, Pep Young and Bill Brubaker in Albany for the International League playoffs.

Instead of letting his spirits get low in the present crisis of his team, Manager Traynor is showing a bold front. . . . Back in his head, Traynor knows exactly what the club needs, and he realizes that "something" will not be surprised this year. . . . Touching on the club last night, Pie said:

"I am confident as I can be of anything that I can build up the Pirates. . . . We are going to have a fine ball club in Pittsburgh."—CHARLES J. DOYLE.

LOTT, STOEFEN IN RYE PLAY

RYE, N. Y., Aug. 27.—(AP.)—The somewhat placid proceedings in the Eastern Grass Courts tennis championships should take a livelier turn today with the arrival upon the scene of George Lott and Lester Stoefen, fresh from their triumphs at Germantown where they retained the national doubles title.

Lott and this big California doubles partner begin competition here a round or two behind most of their leading singles rivals. Cliff Sutter, twice winner of the eastern crown; Frankie Parker, Berkeley Bell, J. Gilbert Hall, Henry Prusoff and Robert Millen of Forest Hills, all have won third-round brackets, while Frank Shields, top-seeded star, and Roderich Menzel, of Czecho-Slovakia, have advanced to the second round.

The British stars, Betty Nuthall, Freda James and Katharine Stammers, are to open today their bids for the women's title. In this division, Norma Taubele, of New York, and Jane Sharp, of Pasadena, already have reached the quarter-finals.

AL ANDERSON STARS

Al (Speed) Anderson, the city's softball strikeout king, chalked up his third no-hit, no-run game of the season as the Hunzekers blanked the Shall Club, 2-0, on the Fifty-seventh Street Field, Lawrenceville, yesterday. This evening, the Hunzekers will engage the C. J. Wards, of the North Side, in an exhibition softball game at Wilson Park.

Pirates Suspend Brovelli, Coast Backfield Star

Player Too Hard To Handle, Is Reason Given

Angel Brovelli, star back of the Pittsburgh Pirates' professional football team last year, has been given the air by the local management.

He has been suspended by President Art Rooney, who declared today that he will not consider taking him back. He has offered him to the Boston and Philadelphia clubs, but they are not interested in taking him on.

The difficulty is said to revolve about Brovelli's attitude toward the club, which makes him a difficult player to handle.

Johnny Blood, the quarterback purchased from the Green Bay Packers, reported today, and Ben Smith, the Alabama end, is due tomorrow. The squad went to camp at Mt. Pleasant yesterday and began working out today.

GENEVA ALUMNI READY

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., Aug. 27.—The football season will be opened at Reeves Stadium here next Monday night when the Geneva College Alumni eleven will meet Art Rooney's Pittsburgh Pirates.

Sam Cooper, ex-Geneva captain and an All-Northern tackle under Jock Sutherland, is assembling the player personnel of the Geneva crew and has called upon all the stars who saw service under Howard Harpster and later under Jimmy Robertson. If plans go through, the alumni eleven will remain organized for the entire season and engage in a busy schedule.

Sport Chatterbox

How about this new football? . . . Some of the boys claim it will be okey-dokey and others are just as pronounced in their rapping of the new pigskin. . . . Lou Little, Columbia's astute mentor has arisen to defend, mayhap a bit abstractly, the oval. . . . He says that making the ball smaller certainly will not hinder the boys, once they get the feel of it. . . . That once the players become accustomed to kicking, passing and otherwise handling the ball that they'll have little, if any difficulty with same. . . . Lou hasn't seen or inspected the oval as yet and therefore, can't discuss the more technical angles, such as wind resistance and the ability of the passers to grip the sphere.

Pitt, Notre Dame and Duquesne will be represented in the local sandlot coaching ranks this fall. . . . Pitt by Toby Uansa with the Rox Rangers. . . . Notre Dame by Nordi Hoffman with the Stowe Independents. . . . Duquesne by Babe Kelleher with a team of his own. . . . The Babe, by the way, is lining up a classy collection of the lads. . . . It's a cinch bet he'll wind up with Red Sullivan for a quarterback. . . . Which won't hurt his ball club one mite.

Watch this lad Malkovich, Duquesne's varsity candidate. . . . He looks to be the money. . . . He's big and fast and smart. . . . Even for a junior. . . . The wise ones claim he's the best snapper-back prospect seen hereabouts for y'ars and y'ars. . . . and we've had our Daughertys, Steins, Cutlers, Mambys, Ducanises and Ciccones.

Speaking of readers, the boys are awaiting the result of the first time Nick Kliskey, of Pitt, gets a straight shot at Southern Cal's Cotton Warburton. . . . If ever he does. . . . The Trojan star is a tough guy to nail. . . . Notre Dame worked for a week on a defense for him a couple years ago and Cotton ran through 'em like a rabbit through a cabbage patch. . . . But if Kliskey does pop him. . . . You can wager Warburton won't be so dashing for a minute or two.—JESS CARVER.

COMMERCE AND INDUSTRY OF GREATER PITTSBURGH

CONNECTICUT GIRL TO STUDY ART HERE

Millicent Hersant from Willimantic, Conn., will be a student this winter in the Art Institute of Pittsburgh, Shady's street. Beginning September 10 she will study dress design and fashion illustration.

Miss Hersant recently graduated from Willimantic High school and is the first student to benefit from the new high school scholarship plan being perfected by the Art Institute. Under this plan, according to Willis Shook, director of the Art Institute, talented high school students may attend day classes for rebated tuition. He said:

"For the past 13 years, the Art Institute has confined its scholarships to its own students in recognition of improvements made during their first year term by rebating the second year tuition. Students awarded such scholarships during the present year are Miss Jean Donahoe, East End; Bernard Davis, Greensburg; Louis Schuth, South Hills; Kenneth Smith, Gloversville, N. Y.; Walter Oelschlager, North Side, and Frank Soltz, Blairsville."

Advance enrollments indicate a 60 per cent increase over last year's attendance, Mr. Shook said. He continued:

"This is a definite indication of better times. Now is the psychological time to study art. Increased business means more advertising and a greater demand for commercial illustrators."

Banks in Brooklyn Aid Housing Loans

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Creation of a central co-operative agency to handle all housing modernization loans on behalf of New York City banks has been proposed by the Kings county (Brooklyn) Bankers Association which requested the New York clearing house association to take the initiative in forming such an agency. At the same time William K. Payne, liaison officer between the federal housing administration and lending institutions, announced that banks in New York City and state have shown an excellent spirit of co-operation by extension credit for various work.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—The American Smelting and Refining has advanced the price of lead 5 points to $3.75 per pound, New York.

FARM INCOME REVISED UP

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Revised estimates of 1933 farm income issued today by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics indicated farmers received a return of 1.9 per cent on their capital investment last year compared with a loss of 4.2 per cent in 1932.

Gross farm income for 1933 was estimated at $5,585,000,000, including the value of products used on the farm. An additional $271,000,000 was received in benefit payments by farmers who reduced production under the AAA, raising the total income to $6,256,000,000, compared with $5,331,000,000 in 1932.

Due to increased cost of machinery, tractors, automobiles, and building repairs, operating expenditures last year were listed as $1,463,000,000 compared with $1,455,000,000 in 1932.

In 1933, farmers had $2,525,000,000 cash income left after deducting total production expenses of $2,737,000,000, which was an increase of $1,000,000,000 over 1932.

The total income available for return on capital and for the operators' labor and management in 1933 was $2,627,000,000. After deducting $2,261,000,000 as wages of operators and unpaid family labor there remained only $366,000,000 as return for capital and management. The net capital of farm operators totaled $19,079,000,000 last year.

RETAIL SALES OF CLOTHING TOPS 1933

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—Business in men's clothing stores throughout the nation continued its normal course during July with nothing more than the ordinary seasonal setback, the report of the National Association of Retail Clothiers and Furnishers business committee showed today.

The report indicated an average improvement over July, 1933, of 27 per cent. More than 80 per cent of the committee members said July was well ahead of the same month last year, which was one of the 1933 months that ruled unusually good.

In line with the seasonal trend, July sales averaged 26 per cent less than June, it was indicated. There were no abnormal declines, however, inasmuch as July usually marks the low point of the year in the trade.

The National Clothier said:

"As usual, business has been determined to a large degree by the local situation. In the drought districts of the Middle West, conditions have not been so favorable and sales volume has suffered. In other districts natural conditions have been favorable, business has been brisk and the future appears bright."

The trade publication asserted advance buying, while not at all frenzied, has been up to average and almost on a par with a year ago when most stores were buying heavily on a rising market.

REICH'S GOLD DECREASES

BERLIN, Aug. 27.—The Reichsbank's weekly report shows that the gold coverage for the mark is but slightly changed and that the gold reserves have decreased by 86,000 marks and now total 74,900,000 marks. The foreign exchange reserve increased 104,000 marks, now totaling 3,400,000 marks.

The index of wholesale prices is 100.1, a drop of 0.1. The agrarian products' index is 99.8, a decline of 0.2. Industrial raw materials and half finished products are indexed at 92.5, or unchanged, while industrial finished products are 115.7, a gain of 0.2.

EMPLOYMENT DECLINES

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—The total number of unemployed workers in July, 1934, was 8,659,000, according to an estimate of the National Industrial Conference Board issued today. This is an increase of 673,000, or 8.5 per cent, from June, 1934, and a decline of 4,364,000, or 34.8 per cent, from the total in March, 1933, when unemployment was at its highest point.

The increase in unemployment in July from June followed an increase of 89,000 in June from May, 1934, when unemployment was down to 7,845,000, the lowest point since March, 1933. Of the total increase from June to July, 403,000 occurred in manufacturing and mechanical industries, 271,000 in trade, and 4,000 in extraction of minerals. In transportation there was a decline in unemployment of 43,000.

As compared with the situation in March, 1933, unemployment in July, 1934, was 54.3 per cent lower in manufacturing and mechanical industries; 17 per cent lower in transportation; 41.5 per cent lower in trade; 26.7 per cent lower in domestic and personal service, and 19.3 per cent lower in extraction of minerals.

In this estimate the workers employed through the Public Works Administration are counted as employed. Emergency workers employed under government auspices, usually part time, in lieu of direct unemployment relief are counted as unemployed.

BOND RECOVERY SPIKES HOPE OF INFLATION

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Appraisals of bond market movements during the past week were somewhat confusing largely owing to the erratic tendencies displayed by United States government securities.

A fresh crop of inflationary rumors, all of which were officially spiked by Treasury authorities, brought heavy selling into the federal division on Wednesday and some of the Home Loan and Federal Farm mortgage bonds dropped to record lows. There were numerous recoveries later, but the trading volume dwindled.

Sober consideration of the inflation gossip, which included the further depreciation of the dollar to the extreme limit of 50 per cent of its former gold value, found most banking circles highly skeptical. These pointed out that, no matter what the ultimate intentions of the administrations concerning monetary manipulation, currency inflation in the near future was hardly likely inasmuch as the Treasury has financing operations in September and October involving some $1,700,000,000 and a good bond market is a necessity.

Prime corporation loans did not pay as much attention to the renewal of inflationary psychology as did the government and the majority of these were only a bit easier at their worst.

Secondary loans, led by the rails, probably gave the best performance and many of these moved substantially higher in comparatively quiet trading. While the latest carloadings report showed a more than season decline in traffic, carrier liens apparently were aided by the move for higher freight rates, steps taken to combat the recent pension law and a revival of hope that Washington will "do something" to rescue the transportation system from their present state of uncertainty. Amusement bonds were among the strong spots, reflecting reorganization plans of some of the companies and reports of a pickup in business.

CITIES REJECT PWA FUNDS

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Increasing ability of cities to borrow money in the investment markets has released a total of nearly $37,000,000 of PWA funds for additional projects, Administrator Harold L. Ickes announced.

Bond buyers bid higher prices than PWA had contracted to pay for two blocks of bonds offered by St. Paul and Minneapolis to finance construction of the Twin Cities sewer and sewage disposal plant project. PWA was able to reduce its $18,048,000 allotment by $1,989,000.

The bids cut the interest cost from the standard 4 per cent to 3.52 per cent and 3.39 per cent.

Meanwhile 34 more recipients of combined loan and grant allotments notified PWA that they were selling their bonds in the investment market. This released $1,852,820 for reallotment to projects on the waiting list, and brought the total released, by withdrawal of loan applications of this kind, to $34,789,000.

The cities withdrawing retain their claim to advances of 30 per cent of the cost of labor and materials.

Morgenthau Plans Loan Refinancing

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and his corps of fiscal experts are shaping their plans for a huge program of government financing in September and October, expected to approximate 2,000 million dollars, it was revealed today.

Most of the securities floated will be for refunding purposes, the government merely borrowing money on new securities to pay off old ones.

Speech Expert

ELBERT R. MOSES

Mr. Moses, whose strange business in Pittsburgh is helping people to learn to speak well.

STEEL EXPORTS UP IN JULY

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—July exports of iron and steel products from the United States were reported by the Department of Commerce today as 233,186 gross tons, an increase over June but smaller than the figures for the peak months of March and May.

For the first seven months of 1934, exports totaled 1,486,360 tons, about two and one-half times the 606,030 in the corresponding period a year ago.

The July exports compared with 219,406 tons in June, 241,753 in May and 261,269 in March.

Scrap exports were 155,812 tons, the second largest total ever recorded and exceeded only by the 173,165-ton trade in March. Of the scrap, 101,293 tons went to Japan, which continued as the leading buyer of American iron and steel products with a record total of 104,001 tons in July.

Tin plate exports, 13,960 tons, were smaller than in any of the first three months of 1934 although higher than in any of the second three.

SCHOOL AIDS MANY MASTER ORATORY

Do you have a speaking engagement on your date book that is causing you to lose sleep? There is a spot in Pittsburgh where you can check your speaking troubles, according to Elbert R. Moses, founder of the Pittsburgh School of Speech for business and professional people in the Law and Finance Building. He said:

"More than 1,000 people representing 50 different occupations have applied for help. It is a curious fact that many intelligent and even brilliant people are utterly at a loss to shape their thoughts while standing on their feet facing an audience."

Some of the things accomplished in mastering shyness and getting rid of inferiority complexes in Mr. Moses' experience would make interesting reading in Ripley's "Believe It Or Not," Mr. Moses says. He continued:

"One boy came in at 9 o'clock in the morning, too shy to ride the elevator. After the seven flight climb he stuttered so badly it took him nearly five minutes to say 'good morning.' Now he rides instead of walking and talks like a poised human being.

"A young bank clerk had ruined her voice calling figures in an office. Six months ago she could not speak above a whisper. Through practice and regained confidence, she is speaking naturally again."

A college professor himself, Mr. Moses started his unusual school because he disliked the way colleges neglected students with defective speech. He said:

"I knew a poor fellow when I was teaching in a seminary. He wanted to be a preacher, but couldn't make the grade because he stuttered. A year or two of re-education might have given him the chance he wanted. I have seen it done. There are ten million people in the United States who suffer from speech defects."

COLOMBO IS SCRATCHED

LONDON, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Colombo, the Derby disappointment today was scratched from the St. Leger, last of the season's five classics for 3-year-olds which will be run at Doncaster September 12. No reason was given by Lord Derby, but it was assured the colt had failed to train properly after a knee injury which interrupted his schedule a few weeks ago.

Ickes Blocks 'Hot Oil' Cargo at Seattle

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—the Oil administration went into action today to keep from Tacoma and Seattle wharves the allegedly illegal gasoline cargo of the tanker Papoose and at the same time set out on the trail of another tanker, the Republic, to make sure that none of her 2,000,000 gallons is illegal.

At the request of Secretary Ickes, the Customs Bureau ordered Saul Hass, collector at Seattle, not to permit the Papoose to discharge any of her 3,000,000 gallons of gasoline at Seattle or Tacoma without presenting evidence that the cargo was legal. It must be shown that the gasoline was not made from oil produced in excess of proration allotments.

The Papoose, which left Houston, Tex., September 30, already has been prevented from unloading at San Francisco.

The administration said the Republic had just cleared Texas City, Tex., for coast ports. Ickes said if investigation indicated any or all her cargo was illegal, immediate efforts would be made to bar her from Pacific ports.

Officials here expect the Republic to put in at San Francisco, Seattle or Portland.

Officials said landing of the cargoes of the Papoose or Republic would disrupt the west coast market, which has just attained stability under the new Pacific Coast patroleum agency agreement designed to take care of the existing gasoline surplus.

STOCKS POINT TO LOWER LEVELS

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—(AP)—Financial markets were in a different mood today with profit-pocking undercutting zeal to relatively quiet ratings.

While there was no especial pressure on the general run of stocks, sub-sets covered in most categories. New York curbing issues were an exception. Gradox were unable to withstand any substantial support, would issues of a cent or more a hundred were suffered by the majority. Cotton eased. Bonds were moderately irregular. The dollar displayed renewed strength in terms of leading European and currencies.

Commission house commentators were fairly optimistic, but much backing and filling was anticipated over the market week or so. The fact that accounts dwindled appreciably on the selling bursts was encouraging to some who feel that the apparent scarcity of stocks would sooner or later whet the public appetite. At the same time various analysts were calling attention to the important economic and political problems which have yet to be solved.

The filing of the railroads' petition with the Interstate Commerce Commission for rate increases totaling some $170,000,000 annually did not arouse any particular enthusiasm among holders of carrier equities.

The plea for higher rates, it was pointed out, served to emphasize the present precarious position of many of the roads. Railway operating income in 1.934, the Commerce Commission was told, will amount to around $.463,000,000 or $83,000,000 short of meeting fixed charges of about $5.246,000,000.

The financial district had little expectation that the threatened textile strike next week would be averted, although hope was expressed in some quarters that last-minute intervention by Washington might halt the walkout.

Bankers were studying the possibilities connected with the government's September-October financing operations which will involve more than $1,700,000,000. Certificates of indebtedness totaling $524,748,500 will mature on September 15, and on October 15 the Treasury must take care of $1,200,000,000 of called Liberty Loan bonds. There was said to be no indication that any but orthodox procedure would be followed.

WHEAT PRICES RULE LOWER

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—Grains were weak early today in dull trading, and prices slipped lower.

Generally fair weather over the North American grain belt, except for scattered showers in parts of Canada, and absence of crop reports gave the market little news of interest. Firmness at Liverpool was largely ignored.

Opening unchanged to ⅜ down, December new $1.04¾, wheat afterward fell further. Corn started ⅜ down to ⅛ up, December 80½-¾, and later lost more.

Forbes

Pickup Ahead, 'After Labor Day,' Signs Good and Bad.

By B. C. FORBES

THE TRADITIONAL "summer slump" has been experienced.

Mr. Forbes

But there are incipient indications that business promises to become better after Labor Day.

ECONOMIC developments have been as mixed as sentiment, just as some are optimistic and some pessimistic, so some industries are doing better, others distinctly worse. For example:

Steel operations have tumbled below 22 per cent, yet electric output shows better than seasonal gains. July and August have brought shrinkage in employment, commercial failures are the lowest in 14 years. Automobile exports are fully 150 per cent ahead of last year, latest railway income figures show a drop of 42 per cent; wholesale prices have soared higher than at any time in fully three years; stock transactions are the slimmest in a dozen years. Bank clearings show up better than business activity had foreshadowed.

THE PWA has granted well over a quarter billion dollars for power projects, but industrial borrowers have been able to qualify for only a picayune amount of federal reserve lendings. Despite the drought, the AAA calls for ten per cent crop reductions during the coming year—at an estimated cost in excess of $100,000,000. Washington is buying silver freely—and shipping gold abroad.

While one arm of the federal government rejoices in a rise in the cost of living (including skyrocketing prices for pork), another arm warns against bringing about any increase in the cost of living. Cotton growers who hocked their production at 10 cents a pound are now informed by a generous Washington that they can have two cents more per pound; cotton manufacturers, who already were compelled to raise wages and cut working hours drastically, have been ordered to boost wages 10 per cent more and cut hours another 10 per cent, a decree not calculated to keep down prices of textiles to consumers.

MEANWHILE labor troubles are breaking out and still more extensive strikes are threatened.

Industry is evidencing more determination to fight arbitrary labor rulings by bureaucrats. A final showdown on the constitutionality of such rulings has not yet materialized. Thus far, the highest authorities at Washington have evinced little readiness to hasten submission of their acts to the United States Supreme Court.

THROUGHOUT the business and industrial worlds, apprehension has become more pronounced. Little comfort has been derived from President Roosevelt's utterances. New enterprise is more conspicuous by its absence than its presence. Hence the shrinkage in employment.

THE PESSIMISM current in influential circles has not been fully reflected by security quotations because of growing expectations that inflation cannot be avoided if the government persists in vast expenditures for a wide variety of purposes. Speculators are again showing interest.

Through the newly organized American Liberty League, business and industry plan to come out into the open in opposition to political policies they regard as subversive to stability, prosperity, property rights and productive employment.

THE WRITER inclines to the belief that pessimism concerning the outlook for business during the final third of the year is being overdone.

Washington may decide shortly to encourage confidence.

TREASURY SHAPING PLANS FOR HUGE FINANCING

STABLE DOLLAR FACTOR IN PROGRAM

In the next two months the government will borrow nearly two billions of dollars. This federal financing a dominant factor in banking, the investment markets and business, is explained in a series of three articles by M. L. Ramsay, Universal Service specialist on financial and economic subjects. The first article, which follows, deals with the probable scope of the financing and its important bearing on the currency policy. Following articles written especially for the Sun-Telegraph will tell how the financing will be done and describe the unparalleled influence it will exert on the lives of Americans through the banks, insurance companies, corporations and private investors.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—In busy Treasury offices experts on budgets and securities are shaping plans for Uncle Sam to borrow, next month and in October, at least 1,770 million dollars, and probably some hundreds of millions more.

As they plan, currency inflation talk is hushed. Silver is pushed into the background. Further dollar devaluation is considered, if at all, as a measure that must wait.

Seven million dollars of government gold that no American could buy, beg or borrow moves out of New York for Europe in two days, with the Treasury's blessing, to keep the dollar stable in world money markets.

Fluctuations in government bond prices are watched and analyzed like election returns.

The borrowing that impends—even though the only part of it that is fully assured represents only a refunding, or floating of new loans to pay off old ones—is rated one of the most significant of Treasury financing operations as well as one of the largest.

"TEST" SEEN AHEAD

In orthodox banking minds the financing is linked with "extravagance" and budgets more hugely unbalanced than any save those of the World War.

New Deal minds associate it with temporary but imperative outlays for relief and recovery. As the President puts it: "Immeasurable benefits justify the cost. And the securities which finance these outlays have been bought by the orthodox bankers, in prodigious quantities and at low interest rates.

Lately, however, for a brief period, banks and investors became less eager, and got their government bonds and notes at lower prices. Some said this was due to inflation fears. Others said "jitters."

The market soon regained strength, but with the smaller premiums and somewhat lessened stability of prices, impending offerings afford a new test of its attitudes and conditions.

EXCHANGE OFFER LIKELY

The Treasury is virtually certain to refund, on September 15, $524,748,000 of maturing Treasury certificates. It is expected also to offer new securities in exchange for about half of 1,246 million dollars of fourth liberty loan bonds which become payable on October 15. The other half would be refunded in October.

Probably Secretary Morgenthau will borrow some money to cover the deficit which has grown, since July 1, to $388,000,000. But he still has from last year's 2,500 million dollar general fund balance a vast store of cash. He could wait a while.

His decision, in the next week or so, will go far towards shaping the course of banking and the investment markets, built largely nowadays on government credit.

WEEK'S STEEL RATE LOWER

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Steel operations for the current week were placed at a record low this year of 19.1 per cent of capacity, the American Iron and Steel Institute reported today. This is a decline of 2.2 points, or 10.3 per cent, from the level of 21.3 per cent prevailing a week ago. The rate a month ago was 26.1 per cent.

The further decline was attributed to continued lack of orders and the shutdown for the holiday period instituted by several plants.

August's Final Week Gets Away to Slow Start On Stock Exchange

There was not much promise of a "coming American boom" in the slow start of the stock market today. August so far has lived up pretty well to its reputation for being an "off month," both in the markets and in business. But by calendar reckoning, at least, the "dog days" are nearing an end.

Brokers greeted the start of the final week of August with something like a sigh of relief in hope that speculation would be more active after Labor Day, when by tradition the seasonal trends should become visible and the ending of the vacation period bring traders and the public back for another tussle with the market.

Last week, under propulsion of several important developments at Washington and belief that other important news was incubating at the capital, the stock market stirred from its recent rut and advanced smartly to the week-end. However, the rise did not carry the market through the trend line which has been descending since early February, when the tops of the 1933 upswing were duplicated. Since February, no important rally has succeeded in crossing the peaks of a preceding rally. The range of fluctuations has been narrowing, but until the market acts "according to Hoyle" and hurdles the descending intermediate trend line, the chart-reading fraternity will be chary of bullish prophets who proclaim the "coming American boom."

For August, with much of the normal attendance in Wall Street away on vacation, last week's rise in stocks in retrospect was rather impressive, all things considered. Some substantial gains were scored by old-line investment issues which have not been tagged as "inflation" stocks solely. Buyers, evidently, have not taken readily the counsel of some inflation-minded analysts to look toward the "cats and dogs" for issues to provide inflation hedges. Action of rails, particularly, reflected the clearing of some of the recent inflation smoke.

Sentiment among many of the brokers in still moderately optimistic, but they rport a highly selective attitude still extant among clients with the average of small proportions. Even important operators who have been doing a little buying have been doing so with caution as there is plenty of doubt concerning the extent of an autumn recovery in business.

The automobile industry provided the brightest page in the history of economic recovery in 1934, according to a survey by Dun & Bradstreet. In addition to injecting new life into the various affiliated trades which supplied steel, gasoline, lubricating oils, rubber, glaass, nickel, lead, mohair, upholstery fabrics and leathe the industry, said the survey, gave gainful occupation to more than 10 per cent of all American workers directly or indirectly. Output in the first half of the year totaled 1,174,325 units, a gain of 73.1 per cent over the first half of 1933, the agency reported.

Of major significance in financial markets this month has been the continued rise of commodity prices, mainly farm products. Leading commodity indices have been reaching for 1930 levels. One weekly index published today was at the highest level in about four years, or since August, 1930. Another index, which uses 1928 as a base, shows a rather sharp fall in the purchasing power of the dollar to a level only about 25 per cent above the 1926 average, the avowed goal of the administration's reflation program. At its peak in February, 1933, the purchasing power of the dollar was about 80 per cent above the 1926 average.

Sugar Market.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—The signing of the new reciprocal trade pact between the United States and Cuba, late on Friday, which reduced the duty on Cuban sugar to 90 cents per hundred pounds, was apparently in line with expectations and seems to have little influence in the sugar market today. Two cargoes of Cubas for prompt shipment, were offered at 2.70 delivered. No sales were reported.

Futures opened unchanged to 1 point advance and later showed net gains of 2 to 3 points on increased covering and scattered local and commission house buying as if influenced by the new trade pact with Cuba. September contracts, after selling at 1.74, reacted to 1.72, while May sold off from 1.94 to 1.91, or back to or within a point of the previous close with the market at midday holding around the lower levels.

Refined sugar was unchanged to 4.75 for fine granulated.

Business Approaches Critical Period

By GEORGE H. SNYDER
Business Editor

BUSINESS IS approaching one of its critical periods. Usually an expansion in volume takes place during September. Trade and production revive following summer dullness.

Mr. Snyder

The coming weeks may be expected to present a definite clue to the general trend of business. Activity in almost all lines has been drifting during the summer. The summer recession appeared to have been greater than is usual for the season, although this may have been due to abnormal influences.

If commerce and industry show a sharp increase in activity in the next few weeks, we may assume that further progress is being made toward recovery from the depression.

Steel Prospects Found Uncertain

STEEL MEN are not particularly cheerful about the immediate prospects for the industry. Production dropped to 21.3 per cent of capacity last week, the lowest since March, 1933. Until recently it was thought that autumn would be marked by a fairly substantial revival in this industry, but there is little tonnage in sight to justify such a hope.

Steel still is suffering from the lack of demand for durable goods. Most of the demand for heavy types of steel is for government projects.

Third quarter earnings of steel companies will make a sad comparison with the second quarter.

Labor Trouble Remains Serious

LABOR TROUBLES have constituted a serious threat to business for the greater part of this year and they still are a menace to recovery. While prompt federal action has settled some of the most important disputes, new difficulties constantly are appearing. The latest of the big strike threats is in the textile industry.

Sharply rising prices for food, largely due to the drought, provide another undesirable influence. The upturn will mean that nearly every family will spend a larger proportion of its income for food in the coming winter than at any time in recent years. This may have an unfavorable effect on retail demand in other lines.

Of course, if general business activity increases sharply, the nation's payrolls may be expanded to an extent to compensate for the influence of higher food costs.

Radio Men View New Crosley Line

Approximately 2,000 radio dealers and their friends attended a theater party held at the Davis Theater last night as the guests of the Anchor Lite Appliance Company. The occasion was the showing of the new 1934 Crosley Radio line. Pictures of WLW broadcasting station and the Crosley factory were shown and a first run feature film. Refreshments were served and officials of the factory explained the fall merchandising plans.

Engineering Stock Trading Unit Lower

The committee on securities of the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange has ruled that the unit of trading in common stock of United Engineering and Foundry Company shall be 50 shares instead of 100 shares, and that 50 shares shall constitute a quotable lot.

Capt. Midnight

By LOUIS ARTHUR CUNNINGHAM

CHAPTER V

Girard stared at the intendant, plucked nervously at his dry lips, licked them with his tongue. He had begun to share Bigot's dread, though he knew not why. A hint of foreboding, or danger, came to him; the room felt chill, though a fire blazed on the hearth. He shivered.

"This man they call Capt. Midnight," said the intendant. "This man with the face of a demon, a face to drive men mad is—Laurent Lemoine de St. Hilaire! An English prisoner told this——"

The lawyer's mouth opened, his jaw sagged and into his small eyes flew a gleam of sheer, pitiful horror.

"Dead," he said in a whisper. "St. Hilaire is dead, my lord, you knew that! Why, I myself paid the Iroquois——"

"Silence!" said Bigot fearfully. "It is St. Hilaire who roams the highways about Quebec and he only bides his time. Simon. It is my life and yours he seeks—or maybe it is a living death like his own he would——"

"God's mercy!" Girard looked fearfully about him as if expecting Capt. Midnight to stalk from the shadows and do him to death. "I—I cannot believe it, sir——"

Woman to Blame

"Nor could I at first. But it is the truth. He was driven from the English colonies, forced to cover his awful visage. You know what those red fiends can do to a man with their knives and their accursed pigments. What a ghastly thing they must have made of him—of Laurent who was so handsome, so proud of his fine brow, his eyes——"

"A woman," muttered Girard. "This for a woman. A pretty face—for that pretty face of Melusine d'Artois, she who looked too kindly upon this youth—Jesu, could she see him now——!"

"She—or any other woman," said Bigot. "Yvonne—what will be her sensations when she learns——" He stopped, pondered, shook his head.

"I do not care to think," continued Bigot. "It is a grim jest, too awful to have any excuse under heaven. I thought St. Hilaire was dead. I aided you, Girard. I sent him on that hopeless mission to New England. Far better had they killed him; this life of his must be far worse than death."

"Can you be positive, sire, that it is he? Surely—" The lawyer's fear was devastating.

"Positive," said Bigot, and gestured towards his desk.

Produces Proof

Simon Girard looked. He rose and walked over to the ornate cherrywood escritoire and stared with fascination at what lay there—a tiny dagger, and strangely set in its keen, cruel blade near the tip—a ruby like a drop of blood.

"Hers," said Girard. "Melusine's—that I gave to her."

"We must seize him," said Girard. "But how catch the will o' the wisp, Simon?"

"Give me time to think of it, sire. I must have time. Perhaps through Yvonne—if he dares to come to her, who is his wife—or if she will have aught to do with him—perhaps through her we can take him—or through Melusine d' Artois—if he should come to her—"

The days immediately following Yvonne Caron's strange wedding were days of gray mist and rain. She did not go out doors, except to walk in the garden at those rare times when the pall of sky seemed for a short while to brighten.

Paul was very quiet and subdued; he did not mention Capt. Midnight or Simon Girard, but acted as if she were not wed at all, as if the whole thing had been a dream. At the intendant's palace and at the Castle of St. Louis, the governor's residence, he heard a great deal of gossip and comment, for it was now generally known and believed in Quebec that Capt. Midnight was none other than Laurent Lemoine de St. Hilaire, who, a year or more ago had led an expedition against the English colonies to the south and had never returned.

Paul Silent

But Paul said nothing. Yvonne seemed unusually bright and happy. In her black, laughing eyes, in her ready smile and bantering word was some quality that Paul could not find a name for. He heard her singing, softly through the house, saw her walking in the garden, touching the flowers with the gentle fingers of their kind, when the rain and murk had gone and the gay sunlight, brighter, seemingly, from its long holding back, flooded all the land with light and warmth.

So happy she seemed—

"You have altered, somehow, Yvonne," Paul said at last, gazing intently into her eyes. "What has come to you? Surely you—ah, perhaps it is that you are rid of Simon Girard—?"

"Perhaps," retorted Yvonne. "Or might it not be because I have a lover, a husband——?"

Paul started.

"A—husband! But surely you do not think of—of this man as of a real husband! You do not consider that you belong to him. You would not lend yourself to his caress——"

"Why not, I pray you tell me, dear brother?" she demanded smilingly yet gravely. "Why should I not look upon him as my own—for he is mine and I his, by the only sanction that we know, by our sacred vows in the presence of God's minister at the foot of the altar. Yes, I am his wife—Capt. Midnight's wife. How odd! How droll! How deliciously thrilling! La-la! Behold Madame Minuit——"

"He shall never claim you—as wife," said Paul. "He—he dare not. My sister——"

'Kiss Sweet'

"So? You would give me willingly to Simon Girard, a man I despised; yet you act righteous now and say that my husband has no right to me. Ah, his kiss was sweet—so light, so tender—to my very toes I felt it, Paul——"

"I ask you to think not of this Capt. Midnight, Yvonne—to build no silly, girlish, romantic dreams about this man whose face you have never seen."

He rose abruptly and left. Yvonne sat on though in a trance. She was thinking of Capt. Midnight.

But Yvonne, knowing, suspecting nothing, remained happy in her dreams and fancied herself very much married. It was of Jean Pierre that Paul spoke when they met that evening at dinner, and Yvonne, though she feigned indifference and even tried to talk of other things, heard every word and remembered it and, unfaithful to Capt. Midnight, in thought at least, lay awake that night thinking of Jean Pierre Martel and waiting for some reason, to punish him and let him know that she, unlike these giddy and easily enamored ladies of Quebec, would not succumb so readily, would not, indeed, react at all, to his flattery and beguiling.

"The ladies quarrel over him already," said Paul enviously. "It will be just a repetition in Quebec of what happened in France. They do nothing but talk about him—about his looks, his strength, his skill as a dancer, as a maker of ballads, as a swordsman. Name of a name! There seems nothing the man cannot do ten times as well as the next fellow."

Yvonne Interested

Yvonne pretended, and quite successfully, to be very much bored by Paul's tiresome listing of Jean Pierre's various attainments. Nonetheless they interested her, even as had their possessor.

"Tomorrow night," said Paul, glad to change the subject, "there will be an assembly in the castle of St. Louis—a very brilliant affair. You are going there, Yvonne?"

"No. Why should I go? After all, I am the wife of a man whom they would hunt down and kill as if he were a wolf. And no one says a word in his defense, though it is known by all that he merely seeks to undo the evil acts of our noble intendant and his official robbers."

Paul was glad for her sake, that she did not plan to go to the Governor's levee the next night. It would not be good for her to go. Perhaps, before she learned the story from cruel lips, he himself could summon up the courage requisite to telling her—but it would not be easy.

Paul had not forsaken his dissipated companions nor rid himself of his passion for gaming, his appetite for wine. He went, some time after leaving Yvonne, content with her dreams, to solitude, to the house of the Chevalier de Rennes. And there were De Pean, Guy Lauzier, Jean Pierre Martel and Simon Girard, sitting by the great bow window, smoking with much enjoyment and watching the river under the waning moon.

Still Friendly

Paul was still, perforce, friendly with Simon Girard, despite the trick Simon tried to play on Yvonne. He owed Simon a great deal of money—gambling debts; and each night's play seemed to push the sum of those debts higher and higher.

"Welcome, dear Paul," called Simon. He went to Paul's side, put an affectionate arm about his shoulders and smiled down at him in a fashion that made Jean Pierre think of Leonardo da Vinci's great loss in not having Simon to pose for Judas in his painting of "The Last Supper." "And how," continued Simon, leading Paul over to the group by the window, "is the bride of Capt. Midnight?"

"She seemed not to mind it," said Paul. "I wonder at her and I feel bitterly sorry for her—wed to this unfortunate——"

"Does your sister not know, then——?" It was Jean Pierre Martel's low, clear voice; he spoke from the shadows—"who this man really is?"

Synopsis

Yvonne Caron's dreams in the Governor's garden of old Quebec are interrupted by her brother, Paul. He tells her of the latest exploit of Capt. Midnight and of the arrival from France of Jean Pierre Martel, who is reputed to be the greatest lover and worst scoundrel in France. Yvonne pleads with Paul not to gamble with Simon Girard. Paul leaves her and Simon appears. He tells her of Paul's theft of government funds and promises protection if she will marry him. He leaves with a warning to "think well." From the shadows appears a stranger. Yvonne and Martel meet. Capt. Midnight holds up Martel, but lets him keep valuables. Capt. Midnight visits Martel and tells him of rendezvous with death. Capt. Midnight stops wedding.

Junior Patrol Mail Box

Who is the greatest man living today and why?

That's this week's contest subject, fellows, and we're looking for more letters about it than ever before in a Junior Patrol contest!

Please read the subject again, fellows. Notice that it says the greatest man living. We all know some of the great men of the past, like Washington, Lincoln, William Pitt, Plato, Archimedes, Raphael and hundreds of others.

What we want you to tell us is who you think is the greatest man alive today—right now.

Your father or your mother, or your older sister or brother can tell you who they think is the greatest man living today. But that isn't the idea. We want you to tell us who you think he is. See what we mean?

Maybe he's the man who helped you with your lessons last spring. Maybe he's the policeman who guards your school crossing. Tell us who you think—and be sure to give his name and address if you can.

Most of all, though, fellows, tell us how you know that the man you write about is the greatest man living. Tell us why. In your letter, try to give good reasons. Explain what he does and says to make him a wonderful man.

The contest ends this Thursday. Today is Monday. So you'll have to get busy right away. You can write just as many letters as you want, fellows, just so they reach Junior Patrol headquarters before midnight Thursday. Hurry along those letters! The more the better! And the quicker the better! They shouldn't be more than 100 words long, but you can put more than one letter in an envelope. Send them all to the Junior Patrol Contest, Junior and Grandpaw and Spike and Snuggins are on their way home.

Little Nit-Wit : Daily Short Short-Story

By JEAN EVERARD

Margery Ridell hit off her yarn with finality and held up a grey sweater. Arthur had looked up from his drawing board to light his pipe, and asked idly:

"Who's it for, Hon?"

"Oh, for some poor person." The little wrinkle that was beginning to show between Arthur's eyebrows deepened.

"Thought you'd just given some money to the City Charities."

"Yes—but I have lots of time to knit, and I can't bear to think of anyone being cold."

"Look here, Hon! I believe in helping out, and all that, but $3 for yarn! Ouch! We'll be cold ourselves, the next thing. We aren't Rockefellers, you know."

"Oh—say—was it as much as that? I never dreamed—and I'll get yarn from the Red Cross after this."

"Say, just because I happen to be the one that earns the money, it doesn't mean I want to boss every cent. But we got to be careful—see how I mean? Suppose I'd get sick or something, or be laid off. We've done our fair share with those sweaters and the five you gave the City Charities. So let's try and get ahead ourselves, now."

As Christmas came near, Arthur longed to get her a present. Every day he passed alluring shop windows with a heavy heart.

The day before Christmas everything turned rosy, for he sold his first advertising copy. It brought only $10, but it encouraged him. He got a gold-piece at the bank, and Christmas morning there was a tiny lump in the toe of Margery's stocking. She was so proud of him she cried, and kissed him and the gold-piece both.

"Let's scratch my initials on it, and I'll keep it for luck! I'd never spend it, never! Unless, of course, I was down to my last cent, on the verge of starving!" So M. R. was scratched on it, and she tried a dozen different hiding places.

He couldn't sell any more ads, though, and in January his salary was cut. There was talk at the office of laying off some of the salesmen. The wrinkle between her eyes deepened, and he cut down on tobacco and lunches and carfares. Every cent he saved went into a tea called the kitty. Margery proudly contributed $3 saved on the washing, but no amount of coaxing would make her tell how she had done it.

For a week he was so absorbed with his own troubles that he scarcely noticed that Margery was white and quiet, and sat every evening staring at her hands. At the end of the week he went to the kitty to drop in 50 cents he had saved on lunches.

"Well, that's one good thing, anyway," he thought grimly, as he lifted kitty's lid to deposit it. He dropped the little box as if it burnt him.

"Margery!" he yelled. She came running from the kitchen. He held out the empty box and made strange motions with his lips. His voice wouldn't come.

"Oh, please, please," she begged. "Don't be mad! There was an old woman—she would have wrung your heart——"

She ran from the room.

Presently he cooled down enough to wonder where she was. She had looked so white when he was yelling at her. He looked for her everywhere, his heart beating in queer, sickening jerks. She wasn't in the flat, and her clothes were gone.

The weeks that followed were nightmares. He had hunted all that first terrible night, even looked at unreal forms in the morgue.

Three weeks passed. One night he turned into the restaurant where he had been eating. He made a long trip that day, based on a flimsy clue, and was heavy with disappointment and weariness. He noticed that his waiter, usually cheerful and talkative, was silent and sad. He thought "I'll ask him what's the matter when he comes back." His sympathy for suffering was sharpened.

But the man came back from a distant table beaming.

"What's the good news, Tony? A while back, I thought you looked as if you had trouble."

"I did boss. Some one stole the money I saved to get my little girl that can't walk a wheel-chair. But that lady over yonder, she asked what's a trouble and she gave me this."

He opened his hand and to display a gold piece, closing the fingers again, lightly. Arthur grabbed the hand and forced the fingers open. There were beads of sweat on his forehead, and he breathed as though he had been running. Sure enough, M. R. stared at him from the gold piece.

Arthur was on his feet opening his bill fold with clumsy, trembling fingers. He waved a twenty at the astonished waiter. He shoved it into the waiter's hand, snatched the gold piece, and with hat jammed over his ears and overcoat dragging, he rushed after the little figure Tony pointed at. She was leaving. When he caught up with her he grabbed her and held her close. Indifferently to passers-by Margery clung to him and cried. He got her into a taxi, but not until they were home did Arthur find words to tell of his heartbreak and his searching, or Margery to describe her misery, and her poorly paid job that she had finally lost.

What if I hadn't found you!" He clung to her as if he would never let her go. Between fierce kisses he muttered:

"You—little—nit-wit!"

Margery began to laugh wildly; laughed and cried until Arthur was frightened, and gave her water and tender thumps on the back. At last she gasped:

"I never thought—I would have you—call me—a nit-wit—and like it!"

HANG HEADS—HERE COMES BABY!

I feel hilious, slightly green,
When cute kiddies on the screen
Act the way they always act;
Were I not so full of tact,
Timid as a worried fawn,
I'd shout: "Stop! This can't go on!"

Ay the antics of each minx
Who gives me digestive kinks.
Were I fearless, were I brave,
Though it meant an early grave,
I would rise and vent my spleen
At the kiddies on the screen.
I would sneer and snort and shout
As it is, I stick it out—
Poor public-spirited critic
Punk — laughing, applauding, cheering
Just as all the others do.
They're afraid they'd be mobbed, too.
Cattle! Sheep! For shame! For shame!
On our cowardice the blame
Rests that we are forced to wait,
For revenge, on lagging fate.
Kiddies—even cute ones—grow up.
Then the little mutts will slow up.
Now they blithely make us squirm;
Someday they will be the worm.
Timid, shy, afraid to turn—
Although they may yearn and yearn.
Some day they'll be adults, too;
Some day turn a bilious hue
Seeing kiddies on the screen
Act so cute it is obscene.

Awk.

And are there any torrid yearners
For gals who go for incense burners?

We Now Know How the Leaning Tower of Pisa Got That Way

It was from the early European dictator hanging out of the top hole and reviewing the troops.

The higher the balcony the safer you are over there. If we did what like that over here all our speeches would be made from the top of Washington Monument.

Dictator Scramolla accepted the nomination over the rim of a brewery chimney. There he was safe. Both the troops and the pigeons were loyal.

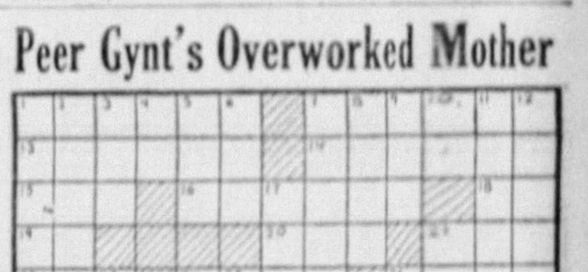
Dictator Hohenzing accepted a term of five years on the roof of the palace at Greasking.

Looking over the roofing he said to his minister of war, "What are those things crawling down in the street?"

The Old Prime said, "Why?"

The Dictator said, "Are they troops or not?"

The Premier said, "What difference does it make? Either way they ain't going fight."



The Die replied, "I know. But I want to hold a press. And nuts will spoil it."

The time has come when any European leader is so foolish as to review his troops from horseback.

Now he gets on stilts.

The minute a man gets in power over there he wants to play Romeo and Juliet. And he wants to be Juliet. Last Romeo stay down there in the garden where he can get overindigent by a bullet.

Juliet will stick to the balcony like a fish hawk to a tree.

It makes a prettier picture and it's safer.

Well, that's Europe. The styles in government change every other season. You can never tell when the army will come along wearing sailor hats.

The higher the fewer. When there is an indignant bull in the pasture you would be silly if you didn't climb the aisles of the highest building.

A Good Platform

Mr. Earle's Promise to Work for a Constitutional Convention Is Especially Commendable

As George H. Earle, Democratic nominee for Governor, presents in campaign speeches, the platform on which he asks election we find in it more and more that is praiseworthy. We like the clearness and definiteness with which he tells for what he stands. There is no straddling, no dodging of a decision.

That was a notable address that he made at Williamsport the other day, in which he pledged himself, "immediately on his induction into office", to "take steps to insure a constitutional convention to permit modernization of our present antiquated and obsolete state constitution."

The constitution must be re-written as the shortest and, in respect to some matters, the only way to get rid of unnecessary counties, townships, school districts, poor districts and other administrative units which nourish a horde of political parasites and add needlessly to the taxpayers' burden.

Mr. Earle has declared unequivocally for modernization of governmental institutions and methods that have come down to us unchanged from oxcart days and are unsuited to present conditions.

The constitution must be re-written to allow us to substitute for our present justices of the peace and aldermen a minor judiciary system in which the judges will be learned in the law and will be paid salaries instead of fees.

It must be re-written to permit many other desirable reforms.

Attorney General William A. Schnader, the Republican nominee for Governor, is said to have become lukewarm on the subject of a constitutional convention. We hope the rumor is unfounded. If it is, he should—and easily can—correct it.

There is a whispering campaign going on against a constitutional convention. It is whispered that the purpose is to permit the Commonwealth to make contributions to sectarian institutions.

Citizens should be extremely skeptical about this story, which looks very much like a canard designed to arouse religious prejudice in the hope that it will lead to the defeat of the constitutional revision movement. We would not be surprised to learn that the story was concocted by scheming politicians, who see in the proposed convention a threat to their jobs.

Mr. Earle's discussion of the need of modernizing the basic law should help to squelch the story and educate the citizens as to what can be done to give them better and less expensive local government.

A Bold Suggestion

Mr. Schnader Thinks the State May Have Power to Tax Some Kinds of Federal Securities

A masterly paper by Attorney General William A. Schnader on "Federal Encroachments on State Sovereignty" was read today at the Milwaukee meeting of the National Association of Attorneys General, of which he is president.

Mr. Schnader leaves the impression that the administration at Washington is skating on thin ice, and that if the courts were to interpret the National Constitution as its authors intended it to be interpreted, some of the activities in which the federal government has engaged in recent years would have to stop.

Particularly interesting is the bold suggestion that court decisions authorizing the federal government to tax the liquor traffic in states, like Pennsylvania, in which it is a state monopoly, may also confer authority on the states to tax some kinds of federal securities. The suggestion offers rich possibilities.

Mr. Schnader called attention to the case of McCulloch vs. Maryland, in which the United States Supreme Court held 115 years ago, in one of Chief Justice Marshall's famous opinions, that the State of Maryland could not impose a tax on United States banknotes. More than 50 years later the same court established the doctrine that the prohibition was reciprocal and held that Congress could not tax the salary of a state official. The underlying principle was, as Mr. Schnader pointed out, that the federal and state governments are sovereign in their respective spheres and neither has the right to tax the other.

Recently, however, the Supreme Court held, in the case of Ohio vs. Helverting, that the federal government has the right to impose a license tax on state liquor stores, on the ground that the sale of liquor is not a governmental function.

The Internal Revenue Bureau has ruled, too, in a case that has not yet been decided by the Supreme Court, that the profits of state liquor stores—profits which in Pennsylvania are used for poor relief—are subject to the federal income tax.

"If the federal government has the right to question the character of governmental action by a state, and to tax it," Mr. Schnader contends, "whenever, in the judgment of the federal government, the action is proprietary rather than traditionally governmental, the state must have a reciprocal right to question the character of the functions performed by the Federal government and to tax federal activities which the states believe proprietary rather than traditionally governmental. If this premise be conceded, substantial increases in state revenue might be realized by the taxation of the securities of some of the federal agencies recently created."

We should like to see this question pursued further. As we remarked, it presents piquant possibilities.

They Don't Just Happen

"Accidents Are Caused," Is the Significant Slogan In a New Safety Campaign

As was to be expected, Pittsburgh's Better Traffic Committee is going to co-operate earnestly in the accident prevention campaign for which Gov. Pinchot recently made an appeal.

The campaign has been prompted by an alarming increase in accidents throughout the state. In the first seven months of this year 1,203 persons were killed and 28,687 injured by automobiles.

The Governor accordingly called for a concerted effort, starting September 1, to promote safety. He has directed the Highway Patrol to go the limit in reducing traffic accidents, and, in particular, to show no mercy to drunken drivers.

The traffic accident toll in Pittsburgh has been reduced in recent months to a point at which the city stands a favorable chance of regaining the title of "Safest City in America." But we still have many needless accidents, and the Better Traffic Committee is wisely not relaxing in its efforts to prevent them.

The committee has chosen as the slogan for the campaign next month: "Accidents are caused; they don't just happen."

Think it over. It is full of meaning. And if you let the meaning sink into your mind, it should make you drive a little more carefully, and watch your step a little more carefully.

Portrait of a Private Business Man

What has become of the old American rejoinder "Mind your own business?"

There was a time when one could. But nowadays—and especially if a man happens to be in business for himself—he simply isn't permitted to "mind his own business."

Bureaucracy, interfering on all sides, insists upon minding the business man's business for him!

Unquestionably, amid the maze of codes, orders, interpretations, assessments and prohibitions, the chief reason why business does not forge ahead is because it doesn't know which way it can go.

As William Randolph Hearst wrote in his recent editorial, "American Business Can Restore Prosperity":

"When the Administration will decide to let business alone so it can bring prosperity back, we will then have good times again."

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

'Come Down Thine Own Secret Stair!'

You want things. So many things? Happiness—health—love—success—beauty—adventure—power—fun—wisdom—charm—

All these things you want, according to your nature. From the day you first shaped thought, you are filled with wants. No matter what you have, you are always wanting something more. No matter what you are doing outside, that cry for something more is going on inside.

And you pray. Not, perhaps, in set, religious phrases. You may, indeed, scorn prayer, deny the existence of God. Yet always you are reaching out toward some invisible source, asking for help. Asking for the things you want—wistfully, passionately.

Always, too, you are seeking an answer for your need. You seek for answers in your home, in school, in business, in marriage, in work and play. And you are angry when you do not find the thing you want in the place where you seek. You are sure you should find it there—something's wrong if you don't. So you blame society, or Other People, or Fate, or God.

With the years the blaming and bitterness increase. You decide that life's a mess. You lose faith in everything, everybody—begin to say cynical things. And you wonder if anyone else has ever felt as you do.

Of course they have. Every human being who dared to think deeply about life, dared to demand answers from life, has felt just as you are feeling. Cave men, brooding in the steaming darkness of primeval jungles . . . savages, tenting in the vast loneliness of the desert, staring up at the silent, mocking stars . . . giants of industry sitting hunched and desperate over shining, mahogany desks in roaring skyscrapers . . . every woman who ever yearned desperately for the love of a man or the clutch of a baby's fingers . . . they have all thought as you are thinking.

Your prayer is part of one, great common prayer that rises, endlessly from Man to God.

Always men are wanting something—asking God for something—telling God exactly what they want, and how to do it.

Once the poet George MacDonald (who probably pestered God a good deal himself) told of that common prayer in a little poem of three verses which he called "That Holy Thing." He begins far back with the arrogant, desperate prayers that rose out of that world into which Jesus Christ was born—

"They all were looking for a king
"To slay their foes and lift them high:
"Thou cam'st, a little baby thing
"That made a woman cry."

Then he speaks of his own need—and his disappointment because he could not find the answer where he sought it—

"O Son of Man, to right my lot
"Naught but Thy presence can avail;
"Yet on the road Thy wheels are not,
"Nor, on the sea, Thy sail!"

And suddenly the truth comes to him and he tells how the answer comes to all of us after our proud planning has failed—

"My how or when Thou wilt not heed
"But come down Thine own secret stair,
"That Thou mayst answer all my need—
"Yea, every bygone prayer."

Not in the proud trappings of royal success, nor on the flashing sails or the roaring wheels of reckless adventure comes the answer to our need—but in the quiet places of our daily lives, in the familiar tasks.

In those simple places and acts where we have never thought to seek happiness, wisdom and strength—"Down Thine own secret stair"—that is how help comes.

NEW MARRIAGE IDEAS

By Winifred Black

Old-Timer? Well, yes; maybe he is. But I sort of like to hear him talk, just the same.

And—whisper it—I really am not interested to know whether an idea is old or new. What I want to know is—does it sound interesting?

All this talk of being "up to date" makes me want to laugh. You hear girls of 18 talking about being "up to date," and well you know that in 10 years they will be hopelessly out of date themselves.

According to their own way of thinking they will be, anyhow. Nothing is any good to them unless it's brand new.

They'd rather wear a hideous little thimble of a hat than the prettiest and most becoming thing a milliner ever made to frame a pretty face—if the thimble is the newest thing.

They don't care to be pretty or attractive or entertaining. They don't want to have commonsense or intelligence. They just want to be "new" and "up to date."

And the poor things don't seem to realize that what's new today is ancient tomorrow—and they'll be ancient, too.

Napoleon was kind of an old-fashioned guy, when you come to think of it; but he seems to have made quite an impression on the world, just the same. And if a new Napoleon should suddenly arrive in Toledo, O., or Oshkosh, Wis., I don't believe he'd bother a bit about being "up to date."

He'd just be himself and the first thing you know everyone would be trying to wear his kind of hat and his sort of boots and his cut of cape—and there we'd be, as old-fashioned as Noah's ark, and as everlasting in type as the hills.

St. Francis of Assisi. What a queer creature they must have thought him—the "moderns" who passed him in the street of his little hill town and heard him giving his lectures to the birds!

Shakespeare. Why, he's a laugh—isn't he, my dear modern? And yet, somehow, he's managed to live, while all the gay gallants who thought him a sentimental old fogey are not only dust, but forgotten dust, at that.

These "new" ideas about marriage and the family—why, my dear, they're not new at all; they're as old as the story of Nebuchadnezzar himself. And, goodness knows, that's old enough!

People tried polygamy for thousands of years, and finally found their way half out of it. And now you think it would be "so modern" to go back to it again!

Whisper: Polygamy has never really gone out entirely. If you know many modern men you'll know what I mean. But at least we've learned enough to pretend to be civilized, even if we're not.

Now, young woman, don't you try to tear down with your feeble little hands the rather shaky wall we have tried so hard to build between us and the savagery of the cave man!

It isn't worth while—it isn't, really—not even if you do think it would be so delightfully "modern."

MARRY-GO-ROUND

By Helen Rowland

The Sweet and Lowdown

A man may always know his own mind—but his heart, like the weather, keeps him guessing. Just because it warms to a girl today is no sign that it won't be frosty tomorrow—so what?

Before a man lets himself get into a love affair, these days, he is careful to make a mental note of all the emergency exits.

It's a wise man who is so unobservant that he is unable to tell his wife the color of his stenographer's eyes.

* * *

The girl who goes in for petting in a Big Way will escape at least one of the disillusionments of marriage; she will become so accustomed to lukewarm kisses that she won't even notice when the honeymoon is over.

* * *

When a woman expects and demands too much from love, a man has a way of dodging responsibility by permitting her to do most of the loving.

Nothing so spoils a girl's style as the effort to be reckless and unconventional when she wasn't born or brought up that way.

The "vampire" is not always the other woman. Sometimes it is the pleasure-mad wife who drags her husband out to an all-night party after he has been working all day for the price of her beauty treatment and her corsage.

* * *

Love will do anything; but it takes a lot of courage for a good, virtuous young man to marry a wild modern girl in the hope that he can "make a woman" of her.

* * *

No woman would boast of her "sensitiveness," remarks a cynic, if she were aware that most sensitiveness is nothing but the painful result of wearing your vanity inside out.

OUR RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Two Birds

Two birds, flying wing to wing
High above the plain,
Sail through sunset's blossoming
Into night's domain.

Vast, pursuing shadows rise
From earth's darkening face;
Swiftly, through the fading skies
Into dusk's embrace,
Two birds, heedless of the voice
Of the wind of night,
Flying wing to wing rejoice
In their silent flight.

Though they lose the sun's last spark
And no comrades sing,
Unafraid, they face the dark,
Two birds, wing to wing.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

They just passed a law in Manchukuo that you mustn't mention the Emperor's name, but you got to call him His Majesty. It's just like if they should pass a law in Kansas that you'd get your head cut off if you ever mentioned Bill White by name, but you'd have to call him his honor instead. I reckon that's one way to beat the depression, but you got to be born east of Claremore to understand it.

Once Overs

By J. J. MUNDY

The person who prys into your private affairs is not actuated by any good purpose.

It may be necessary for you to be rude at times in your efforts to protect yourself from his or her inquisitiveness.

There is no reason why a person inspired by good motives should desire to learn about your private matters.

So, when someone begins quizzing, do not hesitate to set that one where he or she belongs.

If you vouchsafe information of a personal nature, you may be sure it will be peddled about.

Soon a gossipy story becomes decidedly discreditable to you.

It becomes so enlarged that it has no resemblance to your original statements.

The really well-meaning person has no desire to procure from you anything which you are unwilling to tell.

Most good people, in fact, would rather not know intimate facts about others.

If gossipy stories are circulated, it is better not to have known the facts and then there is no blame to assume.

American Ocean Trade A Commercial Prize

By James T. Williams, Jr.

WHEN it comes to giving away other people's property some people seem to be fairly bitten with generosity. Especially is this true of the property of the American people.

President Roosevelt's Secretary of Agriculture apparently fairly rumbled to generosity of this sort when he declared the other day against any further aid to American shipping. Although we now pay to foreign shipowners two-thirds of our international freight charges Secretary Wallace apparently thinks that is not enough. He proposes to repeal the established policy of the United States which enables us to keep a toe-hold on the business and thereby save ourselves from complete dependence on foreign ships for carrying overseas the products of American agriculture, American commerce and American labor.

Naturally, the attitude of Secretary Wallace delights foreign ship owners, especially the British. It is precisely what British shipowners and their spokesmen in the British government are urging. Secretary Wallace must have known he was talking their language when he recently proposed to "plough under" the American merchant marine by depriving it of any further federal aid.

American Ships To the Rescue

WHERE was Secretary Wallace in 1926? Does he not recall that due to the British coal strike British ships customarily carrying the greater part of American cotton and grain exports grew scarce? Has he forgotten how rapidly freight rates advanced? They would have gone skyhigh had not our own shipping board at that time taken a large number of ships out of the laid-up fleet and devoted them to the grain and cotton export trade at reasonable rates. The saving to American farmers that year alone was estimated at several hundred million dollars.

It is easy to understand why British ship-owners and the British government, acting in their behalf, are so alarmed over the restoration of an American merchant marine which federal aid makes possible. They know that the American export and import trade is the world's greatest prize and if American ships, in accordance with the mandate of the Congress in the Jones-White Act, should carry "the greatest part of our foreign trade," instead of carrying as they do today only one-third of it, the merchant marine of the United States would be a world factor to reckon with.

What is not easy to understand, and harder still to explain, is why Secretary Wallace should have selected this particular time to deal another blow to restoring confidence by advocating a reversal of established American policy that would torpedo the merchant marine of his own country and throw thousands of his fellow-citizens permanently out of work and add to the hardships of American farmers and American manufacturers and American wage-earners. There is no New Deal in the Wallace policy but a return of the old and raw deal before the American people determined to build up an independent merchant marine of their own.

Is He Spokesman For Administration?

BEFORE Secretary Wallace is allowed to go any further with his attack on our merchant marine the American people will naturally wish to know whether he is speaking only for himself or for the administration. Is Secretary Wallace the only member of the cabinet who is in favor of depriving our merchant marine of any further federal aid or is this also the goal toward which Secretary Hull is working in his tariff negotiations with the British and other maritime powers? And where does Secretary Roper stand on this vital question? Is he too engaged in the making of plans to "plough under" the merchant marine? If that why he refuses to go forward with his duties under the Jones-White act and foster the development of our merchant shipping?

Before Secretary Wallace starts for Europe on "a good will mission," before he commits this government to the sinking of our merchant marine as "a good neighbor" gesture, Secretary Dern and Secretary Swanson should be given a hearing on this subject.

As to the vital need of merchant ships as auxiliaries to the Navy and Army Mr. Wallace has thus far been strangely silent. This is perhaps understandable. Every one who knows Mr. Wallace, of Iowa, knows no foreign fleet could penetrate to the confluence of the Des Moines and Maccoon rivers where Mr. Wallace lives when he is at home and where he penned the editorials calling for unlimited subsidies to Iowa farmers which started him on his way to a seat in the cabinet.

Human Side of the News

The League of Nations Charges Munitions Makers With Fomenting War Scares for Business Reasons

By Edwin C. Hill

SLAUGHTER for sale! There is money in war, big money. There are huge profits even in incitements to war. Clever salesmen, schooled in the subtle school of that strange old master of the game, Sir Basil Zaharoff, expert Machiavellian influences upon cabinets and chancelleries, buy up generals, employ spies to provoke resentment, suspicion and enmity. One sale creates another. There is no such thing as ruinous competition in the game of munitions murder.

If France's Schneider-Creusot sells a large bill of goods to Rumania, Czecho-Slovakia's Skoda will sell a larger one to Bulgaria. Machine guns at $140 apiece. French 75s at $8,000 apiece. Tanks at $25,000 each. Bombing planes at $100,000 a plane. These are typical items in the price lists of the astute gentlemen who go on rubber heels from capital to capital, conveying injurious gossip as well as business propositions.

League of Nations' Indictments

IF THERE is anything clear at all in the whole muddled world, it is that something will have to be done about the munition makers as war makers if peace is ever going to come to this earth. The League of Nations make no bones about characterizing the munitions makers of Europe for what they are. Here are indictments drawn up by the League's Temporary Mixed Commission:

1—Been active in fomenting war scares and in persuading their own countries to adopt warlike policies and to increase their armaments.

2—Attempted to bribe government officials both at home and abroad.

3—Disseminated false reports concerning the military and naval expenditures of various countries in order to stimulate armament expenditures.

4—Sought to influence public opinion through the control of newspapers in their own and foreign countries.

5—Organized international armament rings through which the armaments race has been accentuated by playing off one country against the other.

6—Organized international armament trusts which have increased the price of armaments to governments.

The great arms firms of the world include Schneider-Creusot in France, Mitsui in Japan and Skoda in Czecho-Slovakia. They and their subsidiaries probably account for most of the world's arms productions. Explosives and ammunition are provided for by a different group of firms closely allied to the arms firms.

The Schneider firm is a key company in the French steel-makers' association, the celebrated Comite' des Forges, which supplies it with its steel. Schneider sells all over the world. Its profits in 1930 were 26 million francs. Skoda is the chief arms purveyor to the Balkans. It has also done plenty of business with Japan and China. In 1929 and 1930 Skoda declared dividends of 28½ per cent.

The chief Italian arms firms are Breda in Milan and Ansaldo in Turin. Their markets are chiefly Spain and Greece. The U. S. S. R. exports no arms, but in 1930 the Bolsheviks, fearing war in the Far East, spent 561 million rubles importing munitions, and, in 1931, 251 million, a serious drain on the Five-Year Plan.

More than 90 per cent of the total arms exports of the world comes from 10 countries. Great Britain alone accounted for 33.6 per cent of the total world arms traffic in 1929, 30.5 per cent in 1930, and 38.2 per cent in 1931. Switzerland with 10.6 per cent, France with 7.8 per cent, Italy with 6.4 per cent, and Belgium with 4.3 per cent. The great importing nations are China, India, the British colonies and the South American republics.

China Big Buyer Of War Munitions

CHINA alone bought 11.1 per cent of the world's export of arms in 1931. Germany is forbidden to export or import munitions of war. The arms firms, extraordinarily interrelated and intertwined, lace the whole world in their net.

Krupp, once the great German arms firm—it employed 70,000 men in its big days—is supposed to control the Bofors Ordnance Company in Sweden which is affiliated with the Nobel interests. Krupp has also connections in Holland and Switzerland. The arms companies sell to each side in any war. They sell to friend and foe alike.

Pluck a bullet out of the heart of a British boy shot on the northwest frontier of India, and like as not you will find it of British make. The Turks used British cannon to beat the British at the Dardanelles; British battleships were sunk by British mines. In the recent war China bought more than one-third of its munitions from the country she was fighting.

Germans are theoretically "disarmed," but any munitions expert will name at least 40 German arms firms that are manufacturing arms today or are ready to do so at a moment's notice. There is money in war. There is money in fear of war. The charts in Patriotism, Ltd., show the effect of international events on munition shares.

Munitions stocks skyrocketed on the Paris bourse from the time Hitler came to power in Germany. Previously, on publication of the MacDonald [illegible] armament scheme they had [illegible] arply. Later they wav[illegible] the World Economic Conference convened they soared again when it adjourned in failure. For the munitions kings real wars would be swell, but they do very nicely, thank you, on war alarms.
